

Contents

Series Editor's Preface ix

Introduction xi

Creating One's Own Food 1

Nature and Culture 3

Even Nature Is Culture 9

Playing with Time (and Climate) 13

Playing with Space 19

Conflicts 23

The Invention of Cuisine 27

Fire > Cooking > Kitchen > Cuisine > Civilization 29

Written Cuisine and Oral Cooking 35

Anticuisine 43

Roasted and Boiled 47

Pleasure and Health 51

Contents

The Pleasure and the Duty of Choice	59
Taste Is a Cultural Product	61
Digression: Playing at “Historical Cuisine”	67
Taste Is a Product of Society	71
From the Geography of Taste to the Taste of Geography	75
The Paradox of Globalization	83
Food, Language, Identity	91
Eating Together	93
The Grammar of Food	99
Substitutions and Annexations	105
Tell Me How Much You Eat and I’ll Tell You Who You Are	115
The How, the Why, and the Wherewithal	123
Food and the Calendar: A Lost Dimension?	129
Identity, Exchange, Traditions, and “Origins”	133
Roots: A Metaphor to Use All the Way	139

Index 141