

Contents

Foreword . . . . .	8
Introduction . . . . .	11
Sociology as a discipline . . . . .	12
Methodological considerations . . . . .	15
Reformist sociology as a type . . . . .	21
Chapters in outline . . . . .	26
Concluding remarks . . . . .	31
Chapter 2: Tradition lost . . . . .	34
The 1960s: a sociological explosion in Czechoslovakia . . . . .	34
Learning from whom? . . . . .	44
Dealing with the tradition . . . . .	52
Carriers of continuity . . . . .	59
Classics and converts . . . . .	62
The specialists, bourgeois or not . . . . .	67
The Young Turks . . . . .	74
Sociological traditions under communism . . . . .	76
The Polish revival . . . . .	77
Romania: predecessors without success . . . . .	82
Yugoslavia: success without predecessors . . . . .	89
Conclusion . . . . .	93
Chapter 3: Sociology and Stalinism . . . . .	95
Sociology and the postwar arrangement in Czechoslovakia . . . . .	95
Situation in other countries of Soviet Europe . . . . .	105
The Polish debates between sociologists and Stalinists . . . . .	108
The conflict between Stalinism and sociology reassessed . . . . .	114
Was sociology a bourgeois pseudo-science? . . . . .	114
Stalinism meets sociology . . . . .	120
Conclusion . . . . .	124
Chapter 4: Ideology that mattered . . . . .	127
The issue with Histmat and sociology . . . . .	128

Let the practice decide! . . . . .	132
The first attempts . . . . .	132
The backlash . . . . .	139
... and the practice decided . . . . .	146
Short-sighted victims of rheumatism and their phantoms in the Soviet debate . . . . .	153
Kuczynski's proposal and its aftermath . . . . .	153
Towards the multi-level model . . . . .	156
Chasing the phantoms . . . . .	162
Poland: A box of chocolates? . . . . .	167
Out of the trenches . . . . .	167
Out of the shadow . . . . .	173
Historical materialism and sociology: a debate in its context .	181
 Chapter 5: The progressive core . . . . .	185
Main research topics . . . . .	186
The sociology of ethnicity . . . . .	190
Research on the Roma . . . . .	196
Ethnicity and politics . . . . .	200
The sociology of social stratification . . . . .	208
The Anti-levellers of Prague . . . . .	213
Progressive core theory . . . . .	224
Conclusion . . . . .	235
 Chapter 6: Sociologists and their Party . . . . .	237
Organizing the discipline . . . . .	237
Her Majesty's opposition . . . . .	246
The Spring and its discontent . . . . .	258
Conclusion: In whose service? . . . . .	267
 Chapter 7: The reform generation . . . . .	276
The purge . . . . .	276
Generation in outline . . . . .	281
Exclusivity . . . . .	282
Ambivalence, mission . . . . .	289
1960s Czechoslovak sociology as a generational project . . . .	294
 Appendix: Articles in sociological reviews by subject . . . . .	300
 References . . . . .	301

Archives . . . . .	301
Printed works and sources . . . . .	301
Index . . . . .	361