

Contents

Introductory note and acknowledgements	5
Introduction	7
Sources of information	7
Structure of this publication	7
Setting the scene: national treatment guidelines	8
What are guidelines and how are they developed?	8
Are guidelines always needed?	9
Identifying and prioritising topics for guideline development	10
The impact of guidelines: the evidence	10
Evolution of national treatment guidelines in Europe	11
From voluntary to mandatory	11
The increasing availability of guidelines	12
The main motivations for developing guidelines	12
A bookshelf of European drug dependence treatment guidelines	14
Interventions and substances	14
Target population and client groups	15
Developing national guidelines: lessons from experience	16
The evidence base for guidelines	17
Implementation: what helps and what hinders?	17
Plans for developing guidelines for treatment of drug dependence in Europe	18
National and WHO guidelines for the treatment of opioid dependence: differences and similarities	19
Conclusions	21
References	22