

Table of Contents

I.
Introduction	6
II.
The Primary and Secondary Sources	9
III.
1. "With Everyone, I Acted Honestly": Stejskal's (Auto)Biographies	11
2. "Thorough, Loyal, Good-hearted": Stejskal and his Friends	13
3. "Without Influential Friends or Others' Help": Early Years	14
4. "A Direction for My Life": the Years with the Navy	16
5. "Impressions of Which One Could Hardly Dream": Journey to Asia	17
6. "Praise the Sea and Hold to the Land!": Stejskal's Travel Diary	24
7. "Counsellor at the Vienna Court of Accounts": A Respected Man in Middle Age	...	39
IV.
1. "A Treasure in the Brdy Forests": The Collection under Stejskal's Ownership	42
2. "The Flourishing of this Museum of Ours": Transfer of the Collections to the National Museum	46
3. The "Danaian Gift": The Further Fate of the Stejskal Collection	47
V.
1. "Everything Curious in the Exotic World": Souvenir or Ethnographic Material?	50
2. "These Items of Great Meaning for Me": The Original Form of the Collection	53
3. "In Foochow I Purchased Four Tea-plants": The Objects from China	56
4. The Donation from 1888	62
5. The Transfer from 1934	65
6. The Register from 1940	65
VI.
Conclusion	80
VII.
Appendices
1. The Stejskal collection and villa as a legacy to the National Museum and the associated correspondence	82
2. "A Recollection of Václav Stejskal"	93
3. Notes regarding the purchase of collection objects according to Stejskal's diary from the voyage of the Aurora to Asia	98
VIII.
Bibliography	101
IX.
The Objects from China: The Catalogue	106