

Contents

Editorial
Lumír Gatnar	7
Motivations, Effects and Reactions to the Support of German Political Elites to Eastward Enlargement in the Definition of a European Identity and Citizenship: 1990-2004
Cristina Blanco Sío-López	9
Central European Subregional Cooperation and EU Membership: A Channel for the Assertion of Elite Preferences?
Martin Dangerfield	29
East-Central European Repercussions of the French and Dutch 'NO': The Case of the Czech Republic & Estonia
Filip Franek	45
How to Catch-up the West: The Confrontation of the Czech Public and Elites Strategies
Pavol Frič	57
Attitudes towards Lithuania's Membership in the European Union: 1997-2005
Vladas Gaidys	75
The EP Elections 2004 as a Polish eurosceptical backlash? Considerations on Public and Party-Based Euroscepticism
Helmut P. Gaisbauer	87
Polish Public Opinion before and after Accession: Is Something Changing?
Simona Guerra	111
Is a 'Social-Democratic' Approach Possible in the Enlarged EU? The Economic Policies of the Czech Social Democrats in Government
Martin Myant	133
Between Europhobia and Europhilia – Party and Popular Attitudes towards the EU Membership in Serbia and Croatia
Marko Stojić	153