

Table of contents

List of Tables	XI
List of Figures	XIII
Foreword	XV
1 Introduction	1
1.1 Us vs Them and liminal entities	3
1.2 Polysemy of “Europe”	4
1.3 European identity(ies)	7
1.3.1 EU position	7
1.3.2 Studies from various disciplines	8
1.4 Introduction to the chapters	12
2 Methodology	17
2.1 The Role of European media	17
2.2 The French print and online media, Le Monde	18
2.2.1 The institution Le Monde	20
2.2.2 The identities of Le Monde	23
2.3 Theoretical framework	25
2.4 Construction of corpora	27
2.5 Textual analyses	30
2.5.1 Systemic functional linguistics	30
2.5.2 Lexicometric analysis	31
2.5.3 Rhetorical analysis	32
2.5.4 Content analysis	33
2.6 Synthesis: quantitative / qualitative combination	33
3 “Europe” in Le Monde’s headline discourse	37
3.1 Methodology	38
3.1.1 Corpus	38
3.1.2 A three-pronged approach	39
3.1.3 Systemic functional grammar	39

3.2	Headline analysis	42
3.2.1	First step: Polysemic use of “Europe” / “Européens” in Le Monde ’s headlines	42
3.2.2	Second step: Foregrounding of the European Union	48
3.2.3	Third step: The various degrees of visibility of individual States	50
3.2.4	Synthesis: Three categories of “Other Europeans”	53
3.3	Towards a framework for the representation of a group	54
3.3.1	Greimas’ semiotic square of Us and Them	55
3.3.2	Media representations of Us and Them	56
3.3.3	The presence of “Others”, different from Us and Them stricto sensu	57
3.3.4	Tentative framework for the representation of “Europe”	58
3.4	Conclusion	61
4	Brexit	63
4.1	Political context: “Britain’s dual position”	63
4.2	Corpus selection	68
4.3	Methodology	70
4.4	Results of the analyses	71
4.4.1	Actor and time framework for the all-genre narrative	71
4.4.2	Contextual framework for the all-genre narrative	74
4.4.3	All-genre narrative vs. editorial narrative	79
4.5	Conclusion	84
5	“Europe at its borderline”	85
5.1	Methodology	87
5.2	“Europe de l’Est”, “Europe centrale,” and other denominations	88
5.2.1	Composition of “Europe de l’Est”, “Europe centrale,” and other denominations	88
5.2.2	Representation of “Europe de l’Est”, “Europe centrale,” and other denominations	91
5.3	Poland, Hungary, and Romania	94
5.3.1	Headline analysis	94
5.3.2	Rhetorical analysis of the editorials	98
5.3.3	Lexicometric analysis of the all-genre corpora	100
5.4	Conclusion	115

6	Ukraine	117
6.1	Corpus	118
6.2	Lexicometric analysis of Le Monde's coverage of Ukraine's links with Europe	119
6.2.1	Ukraine in between Western Europe and Russia	121
6.2.2	Questions of EU values linked to Ukraine's association agreement with the EU	127
6.3	Rhetorical analysis of Le Monde's journalists writing on Ukraine's identity	130
6.4	Rhetorical analysis of Le Monde's editorials on Ukraine's links to Europe	138
6.5	Conclusion	140
7	Belarus	143
7.1	Presentation of Belarus	143
7.2	Corpus	146
7.3	Lexicometric analysis	146
7.3.1	Belarus' foreign policy	148
7.3.2	Political opposition to Lukashenko	152
7.3.3	Lukashenko, Russia, and Europe	155
7.4	Conclusion: Belarus' European and non-European identity	162
8	Turkey	163
8.1	Specificity of Turkey in Europe	163
8.1.1	From secularism to the rising role of Islam in public life	163
8.1.2	Turkey and Europe	165
8.2	Corpus	166
8.3	Lexicometric analysis	167
8.3.1	General presentation of the all-genre and editorial semantic clusters	167
8.3.2	"Migration issue"	170
8.3.3	EU-Turkey relations	173
8.4	Rhetorical analysis	185
8.5	Conclusion	188

9	The fuzzy areas of European belonging	189
9.1	Le Monde's representation of what it is to be "European"	189
9.1.1	Le Monde's prominent representation of the EU	190
9.1.2	Le Monde's position on the contested purpose of the EU	190
9.1.3	Le Monde's representation of EU value support at the State level and people level within the EU	191
9.1.4	Le Monde's position on EU values on the European continent	191
9.1.5	Closer to "Them-European" than to "Us-European" in Le Monde's presentation	192
9.1.6	Part of "European-Them" or, simply, "non-European" in Le Monde's perspective	193
9.1.7	Synthesis	193
9.2	Le Monde's concept of Europe	195
9.2.1	The EU: Its purpose and means	196
9.2.2	Divergence on the EU's purpose	199
9.2.3	Framework for the representation of Europe in Le Monde	204
9.2.4	The oddness of being neither a friend nor a foe	208
9.3	Various degrees of European belonging and news media's role	213
APPENDIX 1
	Brexit corpora	217
APPENDIX 2
	"Europe at its border" corpora	223
APPENDIX 3
	Ukraine corpora	229
APPENDIX 4
	Belarus corpus	233
APPENDIX 5
	Turkey corpora	235
	References	239
	Index	249