

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments.....	ix
Introduction.....	1
The Diversity of Concepts.....	2
Why Concepts Matter.....	8

PART I

CONTEMPORARY THEORY

1 The Psychology of Concepts.....	13
The Classical Theory of Concepts.....	16
Some Reflections on Aristotle.....	20
Prototypes, Exemplars and Ideals.....	22
Theory Theory and Semantic Networks.....	24
What Has Been Learnt from Analytical Approaches.....	26
The Problem with the Analytical View.....	28
Analysis.....	31
The Sociocultural Turn.....	32
2 Narratives and Metaphors.....	35
The Narrative Turn.....	35
Metaphors, Models and Analogy.....	40
Analogy in Creating Concepts.....	42
3 Conceptual Change and Linguistics.....	47
Piaget.....	47
Thomas Kuhn's Sociology of Science.....	49
Misconceptions and Conceptual Change.....	52
Linguistics.....	54
Wittgenstein.....	57
4 Robert Brandom on Concepts.....	61
Introduction.....	61
Brandom's Theory of Concepts.....	62
Brandom's Critique of the Psychology of Concepts.....	68
Critique of Brandom's Theory of Concepts.....	70
Conclusion.....	75

5	Where We Are Now with Concepts .....	77
	Thought-Forms and Mental Images .....	77
	Networks, Plots, Categories, Theories and Institutions.....	82
	Conclusion .....	84

PART II

HEGEL

6	The Story of the Concept.....	89
	Descartes and the Mind/Matter Dichotomy .....	89
	Kant and the Subject/Object Relation.....	94
	Herder, Goethe and Culture .....	95
	Hegel's Appropriation of the Urphänomen .....	102
	Hegel and Mediation .....	105
	Formations of Consciousness .....	109
	The Concept.....	112
7	Hegel's Logic.....	113
	The Subject Matter of the Logic .....	113
	A Presuppositionless Philosophy? .....	116
	Moving Concepts.....	118
	The Logic Concerns Real Situations .....	119
	Being Is the Concept In-Itself .....	121
	Essence Is Reflection .....	124
	The Abstract Concept .....	126
	The Genesis of the Concept.....	129
	Each Division Has a Distinct Form of Movement .....	131
	Hegel's Logic and Categorisation .....	133
8	The Genesis of the Concept.....	135
	Being .....	135
	Reflection.....	138
9	The Realisation of the Concept .....	145
	The Abstract Concept .....	145
	Being and the Concept.....	150
	Development of the Concept.....	151
	The Individual, Universal and Particular .....	152
	The Immediate Concept.....	155

	Objectification.....	159
	Hegel's Critique of the Individual/Society Dichotomy .....	160
10	Hegel's Psychology .....	163
	The Subjective Spirit.....	163
	Subject and Object.....	166
	The Psyche.....	168
	Consciousness .....	170
	Intelligence or "Free Mind" .....	173
	Practical and Theoretical Spirit.....	176
	The Individual Self.....	177
	Conclusion .....	178

PART III

FROM PHILOSOPHY TO THE HUMAN SCIENCES

11	The Critical Appropriation of Hegel.....	181
	Hegel and Activity .....	182
	Hegel's Idealism .....	184
	Concepts Are Processes Not Entities .....	185
	The Structure of the Concept.....	187
	Marx.....	189
12	Sources of Cultural Psychology .....	197
	German Natural Science.....	198
	French Sociology.....	209
	American Pragmatism .....	212

PART IV

VYGOTSKY

13	Concepts in Childhood.....	225
	Concepts .....	230
	The 'Double Stimulation' Experiment.....	231
	Infancy.....	235
	Syncretic Concepts.....	236
	Complexes .....	238
	Potential Concepts and Preconcepts .....	245
	Conclusion .....	247

14	Vygotsky on 'True Concepts' .....	249
	Scientific Concepts .....	249
	The Concepts of Social Science .....	250
	The Method for Investigating Concepts.....	252
	True Concepts and Spontaneous Concepts .....	252
	The Concept and Its Definition .....	254
	Concepts and Word Meaning.....	255
	Concepts and Problem-Situations .....	257
	The Development of Concepts .....	260
	Conscious Awareness .....	264
	Definitions.....	268
	Concepts Are Part of a System .....	269
	Generalisation .....	272
	Conclusion .....	274
15	Concepts and Activity.....	277
	Concepts and Activity Theory.....	278
	Concepts and Predicaments.....	280
	True, Scientific and Everyday Concepts in Social Life.....	283
	Concepts and Material Culture .....	285
	Dialogical and Cultural Theory.....	288
	Conclusion .....	289
	Conclusion
	Current Research in the Light of Hegel and Vygotsky .....	291
	What Is a Concept? .....	292
	Objectification and Reification.....	295
	Abstract Generality .....	297
	Self-Realisation and Sustainability.....	298
	References.....	301
	Index.....	305