

Contents

Acknowledgments	9
Introduction.....	11
Part I: CONCEPTS, HUMAN UNIVERSALS, AND ESSENTIALISED RELIGIOUS IDENTITIES
1. Concepts, Categories, and Classifications.....	16
1.1 Concepts.....	19
1.2 Categories and Classifications	22
1.3 Acquisition of Concepts and Formation of Classifications	23
1.4 Stability of Concepts and Dynamics of Change	25
1.5 Conceptual Communities and Conceptospheres.....	29
2. “Nature Versus Nurture” or “Nature and Nurture”?
Old Problem, New Solutions.....	34
2.1 Homo Culturalis – Man, a Cultural Being and the Idea of Human Uniqueness.....	36
2.2 Nature, Nurture and Dualistic Epistemology: Anthropological Perspectives	41
2.2.1 Edward B. Tylor	42
2.2.2 Adolf Bastian.....	43
2.2.3 Franz Boas.....	44
2.2.4 Alfred L. Kroeber.....	47
2.2.5 Neoevolutionism and Cultural Ecology	48
2.2.6 Cultural Materialism – Marvin Harris.....	50
2.2.7 Claude Lévi-Strauss, a Cognitivist?	53
2.2.8 Sapir-Whorf Hypothesis and Linguistic Determinism.....	56
2.2.9 Nature and Culture – a Necessary Unity: Gregory Bateson.....	61
2.3 Postmodern Criticism in Anthropology: Inventing Nature and Culture.....	63
2.3.1 Roy Wagner	63
2.3.2 Nature and Culture as “Western” Social Constructs	66
2.4 The Adapted Mind and Integrated Causal Model of Social Sciences.....	67
2.5 Generative Linguistics: Noam Chomsky.....	71

2.6	Cognitive Anthropology: Brent Berlin and Paul Kay	74
2.6.1	Brent Berlin and Ethnobiological Classifications	77
2.6.2	Scott Atran and Douglas Medin on Folk Taxonomies.....	79
2.7	Cognitive Linguistics: George Lakoff and Mark Johnson.....	81
3.	Embodied Mind	85
3.1	Embodied Cognition, Cartesian Dualism and the Folk Theory of Essences	87
3.2	Essentialist Thinking and Generic Species	91
3.2.1	Psychological Essentialism and Identity Formation	92
3.2.2	Psychological Essentialism and Boundary Intensification.....	93
3.2.3	Lawrence A. Hirschfeld and Intrinsicisation of Identities.....	95
3.2.4	Criticism of Psychological Essentialism	98
3.3	Returning to Language: Cognitive Essentialism, Identities, and Generic Statements.....	101
3.3.1	Cultural, Social and Neuropsychological Factors of Conceptualisations	101
3.3.2	Psychological Essentialism as an Evolutionary Adaptation	107
3.3.3	Psychological Essentialism in Conceptualisations of Human Identities	111
3.3.4	Contractual and Essentialised Conceptualisations of Social Identities.....	116
3.3.5	Language and Conceptualisation of Identities	120
3.3.6	Generic Statements and Conceptualisations of Human Identities	124
3.3.7	Generic Statements, Essentialisation of Human Identities and the Human Brain.....	136
3.3.8	The Impact of Generic Statements on the Formation of Essentialised Conceptualisations of Identities	138
4.	Essentialisation of Religions and Religiously Interpreted Identities	143
4.1	Studying Religion from the Perspective of the Study of Religions.....	143
4.2	Mircea Eliade and the Essentialist Conceptualisation of Religion	145

4.3	“It is the Scale that Makes the Phenomenon”: Sociocultural and Neuropsychological Factors of Religiously Interpreted Phenomena.....	148
4.4	Religiously Interpreted Identities.....	151
4.5	Psychological Essentialism and Religiously Interpreted Identities.....	154
5.	Conclusion and Summary.....	160

Part II: CONCEPTUALISING, LEARNING AND STUDYING RELIGION/S/ IN THE CZECH REPUBLIC AND THE WORLD RELIGIONS PARADIGM

1.	Introduction	166
2.	Czech Religiosity.....	169
2.1	Theoretical and Methodological Basis for an Overview Analysis of Czech Religiosity.....	173
2.2	Religious Affiliation.....	175
2.3	Attendance at Religious Services.....	181
2.4	Functional Features of Religion and Situational Context	183
2.5	Substantive Characteristic of Belief and Czech Religiosity	184
2.6	Religiously Interpreted Identities in the Czech Context.....	188
3.	“World Religions” as a Taxonomic System and Paradigm.....	193
3.1	The World Religions Paradigm in the Research Tradition	196
3.2	The Paradigm Formation: Cornelis P. Tiele, Max Weber and Ernst Troeltsch	196
3.3	The World Religions Paradigm in the 20 th Century and in the Czech Context	198
3.4	Criticism of the World Religions Paradigm.....	202
4.	The Scientific Imagining of Religion, Essentialisation of Religion, Religious Identities and the World Religions Paradigm	204
4.1	Wilfred C. Smith and Reification of Religion	206
4.2	The World Religions Paradigm from the Cultural Turn Perspective	208
4.3	Summary of Criticism of the World Religions Paradigm and the Cognitive Sciences Perspective.....	213

5. World Religions and Curricular Documents in the Czech Education System	218
5.1 Methodology	218
5.2 The Education Act.....	219
5.3 Framework Educational Programme for Basic Education.....	220
5.3.1 Analysis of the Framework Educational Programme for Basic Education	221
5.4 Framework Educational Programme for Secondary General Education	223
5.4.1 Analysis of the Framework Educational Programme for Secondary General Education.....	224
6. Conclusion and Summary	229
Conclusion – Epilogue	233
References	236
Index	285
Summary	289