

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Foreword by David Sobel	xi
Introduction	1
1 Nature Pedagogy, Forest School ethos and valuing nature	7
2 History of nature education – the influence on nature-based practice	21
3 Nature Pedagogy – teaching within a nature-centric worldview	42
4 Nature Pedagogy models	65
5 Our sensory system – how nature stimulates sensory development and integration	90
6 Play and nature – the ludic process and risky play	114
7 The brain, body and place	143
8 Behavioural theories – the underpinning of a healthy problem-solving community	172
9 Strategies for creating a healthy problem-solving community	200
10 Planning a nature-based programme	229
11 Planning to action	267
12 Crafting – working with our hands in the natural world	295

13	Journey with plants and animals – working with the ecological	335
14	Nature Pedagogy's place in the world – teaching within a nature-centric worldview	367
	Index	382

Support Material available at www.routledge.com/9780367425616

- chapter appendices with many 'tools' and 'tables'
- bonus online chapter: 'The evidence and green interventions'