

TABLE OF CONTENTS

PART I: MORPHOLOGY AND MORPHO-PHONEMICS	1
CHAPTER 1: TOWARD EXPLANATION IN MORPHOLOGY	3
1. Morphological fusion.	4
2. Allomorphy.	5
3. Grammatical meaning.	7
CHAPTER 2: SEMANTIC DETERMINANTS OF INFLECTIONAL EXPRESSION	11
1. Lexical, inflectional and syntactic expression.	11
2. Determinants of inflectional expression.	13
2.1. Relevance.	13
2.2. Generality.	16
3. Inflectional categories.	20
4. Cross-linguistic survey.	24
5. The distribution of verbal categories.	29
6. The order of morphemes.	33
7. Degree of fusion with the stem.	36
8. Explaining the correlations.	38
9. Morphology and word order.	43
Notes	47
CHAPTER 3: THE ORGANIZATION OF PARADIGMS	49
1. The basic-derived relation.	50
2. Degree of relatedness.	58
3. Experimental evidence.	66
4. Velar subjunctives.	68
5. Local markedness.	74
6. Summary.	77
Notes	78

CHAPTER 4: THE LEXICAL / DERIVATIONAL / INFLECTIONAL CONTINUUM	81
1. Distinguishing derivation from inflection.	81
1.1. Relevance and two types of derivational morphology.	82
1.2. Lexical generality.	84
1.3. Causes of lack of lexical generality.	86
2. Lexical split.	88
3. Inflectional split.	91
4. Degree of fusion.	96
5. The difference between derivational and inflectional meaning.	98
5.1. The expression of aspect.	100
5.2. Number in verbs.	102
6. Compounding and incorporation.	105
7. Conclusion.	109
Notes	109
CHAPTER 5: TWO PRINCIPLES IN A DYNAMIC MODEL OF LEXICAL REPRESENTATION	111
1. Rote or combination?	111
2. Lexical representation of regular forms.	113
3. Differences between regular and irregular forms.	115
4. Lexical strength.	117
5. Lexical connection.	118
6. Evidence for varying lexical strength.	119
7. Evidence for degrees of lexical connection.	123
8. The representation of a complex paradigm.	124
9. Cross-paradigmatic relations.	127
10. Morphological classes.	129
11. Productivity.	132
12. Summary of the proposed model.	134
13. Conclusion.	134
Notes	135
PART II: ASPECT, TENSE AND MOOD INFLECTIONS IN THE LANGUAGES OF THE WORLD.	137
Introduction to Part II.	137
CHAPTER 6: ASPECT	141

1. Perfective / imperfective, habitual / continuous.	141
2. Formal correlates of generality of meaning.	143
3. Perfective / imperfective and the inflectional / derivational scale.	145
4. Markedness values.	147
5. Inceptive aspect.	147
6. Iterative aspect.	150
7. Less usual meanings for "aspects".	151
8. Aspect as a grammatical category.	152
Notes	153
CHAPTER 7: TENSE	155
1. Present / past.	155
2. Future.	156
3. Anterior.	159
4. Tense as a grammatical category.	161
Notes	163
CHAPTER 8: MOOD	165
1. Mood and modality.	165
2. The functions of mood.	169
3. Imperatives and related moods.	171
4. Interrogatives.	174
5. Negatives.	175
6. Potential, dubitative and related functions.	178
7. Evidentials.	184
8. Emphatics.	185
9. Subjunctives and conditionals.	186
10. Conclusion.	188
Notes	189
CHAPTER 9: ASPECT, TENSE AND MOOD AS GRAMMATICAL CATEGORIES.	191
1. Mood as a cross-linguistic grammatical category.	191
2. The ordering of aspect, tense and mood markers.	196
3. Factors determining the development of verbal inflection.	200
Notes	205

CHAPTER 10: CONCLUSION. 207

1. The interaction of rules and rote processing. 208

2. Diachronic mechanisms. 210

Notes 212

APPENDIX: LANGUAGES OF PERKINS' SAMPLE. 215

REFERENCES 217

INDEX 231

— 5.1. The expression of aspect. 201

5.2. Number in verbs. 152

6. Compounding and incorporation. 152

7. Conclusion. 156

Notes 159

CHAPTER 5: TWO PRINCIPLES IN A DYNAMIC MODEL OF LEXICAL REPRESENTATION. 111

1. Rote or combination? 162

2. Lexical representation of regular forms 162

3. Differences between regular and irregular forms 169

4. Lexical strength. 171

5. Lexical connection. 174

6. Evidence for varying lexical strength. 175

7. Evidence for a cross-linguistic principle of evidence. 178

8. The representation of a form in a paradigm. 184

9. Cross-paradigmatic relations. 185

10. Morphological classes. 186

11. Productivity. 188

12. Summary of the proposed model. 189

13. Conclusion. 189

CHAPTER 8: MOOD 111

1. Mood and modality. 111

2. The functions of mood. 115

3. Imperatives and related moods. 117

4. Interrogatives. 117

5. Negatives. 117

6. Potential, dubitative and related functions. 121

7. Evidentials. 124

8. Emphatics. 127

9. Subjunctives and conditionals. 129

10. Conclusion. 131

Notes 134

CHAPTER 9: ASPECT, TENSE AND MOOD AS GRAMMATICAL CATEGORIES. 191

1. Mood as a cross-linguistic grammatical category. 191

2. The ordering of aspect, tense and mood markers. 195

3. Factors determining the development of verbal inflection. 199

II. Part of Introduction 202

CHAPTER 6: ASPECT 141