

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	1
--------------	---

CHAPTER ONE: CREATING A WORLD

1.0 Where does a story begin?	11
1.1 Moments of change; the control-seeking brain	11
1.2 Curiosity	17
1.3 The model-making brain; how we read; grammar; filmic word order; simplicity; active versus passive language; specific detail; show-not-tell	20
1.4 World-making in fantasy and science fiction	31
1.5 The domesticated brain; theory of mind in animism and religion; how theory-of-mind mistakes create drama	33
1.6 Saliency; creating tension with detail	39
1.7 Neural models; poetry; metaphor	41
1.8 Cause and effect; literary versus mass-market storytelling	48
1.9 Change is not enough	56

CHAPTER TWO: THE FLAWED SELF

2.0	The flawed self; the theory of control	61
2.1	Personality and plot	68
2.2	Personality and setting	72
2.3	Personality and point of view	76
2.4	Culture and character; Western versus Eastern story	78
2.5	Anatomy of a flawed self; the ignition point	84
2.6	Fictional memories; moral delusions; antagonists and moral idealism; antagonists and toxic self-esteem; the hero-maker narrative	92
2.7	David and Goliath	98
2.8	How flawed characters create meaning	100

CHAPTER THREE: THE DRAMATIC QUESTION

3.0	Confabulation and the deluded character; the dramatic question	107
3.1	Multiple selves; the three-dimensional character	114
3.2	The two levels of story; how subconscious character struggle creates plot	119
3.3	Modernist stories	128
3.4	Wanting and needing	131
3.5	Dialogue	132
3.6	The roots of the dramatic question; social emotions; heroes and villains; moral outrage	136
3.7	Status play	143
3.8	King Lear ; humiliation	149

3.9	Stories as tribal propaganda	153
3.10	Antiheroes; empathy	163
3.11	Origin damage	169

CHAPTER FOUR: PLOTS, ENDINGS AND MEANING

4.0	Goal directedness; constriction and release; video games; personal projects; eudaemonia	183
4.1	The story event; the standard five-act plot; plot as recipe versus plot as symphony of change	190
4.2	The final battle	198
4.3	Endings; control; the God moment	201
4.4	Story as a simulacrum of consciousness; transportation	206
4.5	The power of story	208
4.6	The value of story	211
4.7	The lesson of story	212
4.8	The consolation of story	212

	APPENDIX: THE SACRED FLAW APPROACH	215
--	------------------------------------	-----

	A NOTE ON THE TEXT	257
	ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	259
	NOTES AND SOURCES	261
	INDEX	285