

Contents

Preface	page vii
Introduction	1
Part I Groundwork	27
1 Scientific Composition, the Universe, and Everything: Or, Reductionism and Emergentism in the Sciences and Philosophy	29
2 A Beginning Framework for Scientific Composition	62
Part II The Roots of Reduction	101
3 How to be a Scientific Reductionist: Defending “Nothing But” Claims and an Ultimate Scientific Image	103
4 Understanding Scientific Reductionism: Fundamentalist Views of Ontology, Laws, Sciences, and Methodology	140
Part III The Fruits of Emergence	171
5 The Varieties of Emergence: On Their Natures, Purposes, and Obligations	173
6 A Whole Lot More From “Nothing But”: Conditioned Aggregation, Machresis, and the Possibility of Strong Emergence	200
7 Understanding Scientific Emergentism: A Mutualist Nature and its Interdependent Levels, Laws, and Sciences	234

Part IV	New Landscapes, New Horizons	267
8	Our Competing Visions of Nature and the Sciences: Illuminating the Deeper Debates and Viable Positions	269
9	Making the Issues Concrete: The Scientific Hypotheses and Their Empirical Differences	299
10	The Age of Reduction versus the Age of Emergence: What Has Been Successfully Shown from the Sciences (So Far)	322
	Glossary	356
	Bibliography	363
	Index	380