
Contents

Notes on Contributors	vii
Preface	xi
Credits	xiii
Introduction: Sports in Comparative and Developmental Perspective	1
Part I: Perspectives on the Making of Modern Sports	11
The Sociology of Sport in the Ancient World Peter C. McIntosh	19
Sport in the Civilising Process: Aspects of the Development of Modern Sport Eric Dunning	39
The Victorian Cult of the Family and the Early Years of Female Sport Jennifer Hargreaves	71
The Critique of Sport in Modernity: Theorising Power, Culture, and the Politics of the Body Richard Gruneau	85
Conclusion to Part I	111
Part II: Aspects of the Diffusion and Development of Modern Sports	115
The Diffusion of Sports and the Problem of Cultural Imperialism Allen Guttmann	125
Sport in Developing Countries Klaus Heinemann	139
International Aspects of Sport in Latin America: Perceptions, Prospects, and Proposals Joseph L. Arbena	151
The Industrialisation of the United States and the 'Bourgeoisification' of American Sport Alan Ingham and Robert Beamish	169
American Football, British Society, and Global Sport Development Joseph Maguire	207
Conclusion to Part II	231

Part III: Comparative and Developmental Studies of Modern Sports Cultures	235
Sport in Capitalist and Socialist Countries: A Western Perspective James Riordan	245
Sport, Politics, and South Africa (1948-1989) Grant Jarvie	265
Sport and the Economy: A Developmental Perspective Bero Rigauer	281
Conclusion to Part III	307
Postscript: Sociology and the Sociology of Sport in a Rapidly Changing World	311
Index	313