

Contents

Introduction	1
1 From Geisteswissenschaft to Human Science	8
Dualism, idealism, and neo-Kantianism	9
Hermeneutics	13
Constructivism and deconstructivism	15
Different interests – different sciences	20
Between biologism and social constructivism	23
Ideas which the humanities should live by	25
2 The Naturalization of the Humanities	29
What is naturalization?	32
Human science is not brain science	36
Norms, meanings, and perspectives	44
Normative discourses	47
Private lives	53
The construction of social reality	54
3 Explanation in the Sciences of Man	57
Explanation as an act of communication	59
Intentional explanations	65
Explanation in the social sciences	71
Explanation in the humanities	75
4 The Pragmatics of Interpretation	82
The standard view of interpretation	84
Interpretation as explanation	86
The object of interpretation	89
Two notions of interpretation	92
Why everything is not interpretation	96
The epistemic status of interpretation	103
5 The Aims of Interpretation	108
Interpretation as answering questions	110
Can interpretations be objective?	116
The resurrection of the author	121
Seeing art and literature as evocative communication	132
Eco's dilemma	139

6 How to Overcome a Myth?	143
Theory pluralism	145
Las Meninas	149
Interpretation and evaluation	157
The norms of scientific interpretation	168
7 Neomodernism – A New Approach to Humanistic Science?	176
Norms	178
Facts and truth	180
Interpretation	185
Meaning	189
The source of the phenomena	191
The unity of the sciences	194
What then?	197
Conclusion	199
Notes	207
References	216
Index	221