

CONTENTS

Foreword	page	ix
Preface		xi
Table of Cases		xiii
List of Abbreviations		xviii
1	Introduction	1
1.1	The Object of the Study	1
1.2	Sources of Controversy	3
1.3	Factors Contributing to Uncertainty	13
1.4	Countermeasures and Cognate Concepts	15
1.4.1	Countermeasures, Reprisals and Self-Defence	16
1.4.2	Countermeasures and the Suspension of Obligations	21
1.4.3	Countermeasures and Sanctions	21
1.4.3.1	Countermeasures and Measures under Chapter VII UNC	24
1.4.3.2	Countermeasures by International Organizations and Member States	24
1.4.4	Countermeasures, Retorsion and Other Miscellaneous Concepts	27
1.4.5	Third-Party Countermeasures	31
1.5	Outline of the Study	35
2	Third-Party Countermeasures and the ICJ	36
2.1	The ICJ's Contribution	38
2.1.1	The Barcelona Traction Case	44
2.1.2	The Namibia Case	58

2.1.3	The Tehran Hostages Case	61
2.1.4	The Nicaragua Case	64
2.2	Conclusion	70
3	Third-Party Countermeasures in the ILC	72
3.1	The ILC's Contribution on First Reading (1963–1996)	72
3.1.1	Special Rapporteur Ago's Proposals	74
3.1.2	Special Rapporteur Riphagen's Proposals	78
3.1.3	Special Rapporteur Arangio-Ruiz's Proposals	81
3.2	The ILC's Contribution on Second Reading (1997–2001)	85
3.2.1	Special Rapporteur Crawford's Proposals	86
3.2.1.1	International Crimes of State	87
3.2.1.2	Invocation of Responsibility for Breaches of Communitarian Norms	89
3.2.1.3	Third-Party Countermeasures	93
3.3	Conclusion	109
4	Third-Party Countermeasures in State Practice	111
4.1	Some Problems in the Assessment of Practice	111
4.2	An Assessment of Practice	112
4.2.1	Developing Countries – South Africa (1960–1964)	113
4.2.2	European States – Greece (1967–1970)	117
4.2.3	United States and European States – Uganda (1971–1978)	119
4.2.4	European States – Central African Republic (1979)	123
4.2.5	European and African States – Liberia (1980)	126
4.2.6	Western Countries – Soviet Union (1980)	127
4.2.7	Western Countries – Poland and the Soviet Union (1981)	133
4.2.8	Western Countries – Argentina (1982)	140
4.2.9	Western Countries – Soviet Union (1983)	149
4.2.10	Western Countries – South Africa (1985–1986)	154

4.2.11	Miscellaneous Countries – Iraq (1990)	159
4.2.12	European and Commonwealth States – Nigeria (1995)	162
4.2.13	African States – Burundi (1996)	168
4.2.14	United States – Sudan (1997–present)	176
4.2.15	Miscellaneous Countries – Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (1998–2000)	181
4.2.16	Miscellaneous Countries – Burma (2000–present)	193
4.2.17	Miscellaneous Countries – Zimbabwe (2002–present)	203
4.2.18	European States and the United States – Belarus (2004–present)	211
4.2.19	Switzerland and the United States – Libya (2011)	216
4.2.20	Miscellaneous Countries – Syria (2011–present)	220
4.2.21	Western States – Russia (2014–present)	231
5	Permissibility of Third-Party Countermeasures: Evaluation	239
5.1	The ILC’s Arguments against Third-Party Countermeasures	240
5.1.1	The Absence of a Widespread and Representative Practice	240
5.1.2	The Absence of a Consistent Practice	245
5.1.3	The Absence of a Practice Accepted as Law	250
5.2	Other Salient Considerations	255
5.2.1	The Relationship between Third-Party Countermeasures and Security Council Enforcement Measures	255
5.2.2	Communitarian Norms Triggering Resort to Third-Party Countermeasures	262
5.2.3	The Ascertainment of Wrongful Conduct	264
5.2.4	The Seriousness of the Breach	268
5.2.5	Third-Party Countermeasures on Behalf of an Injured State	270
5.2.6	The Indeterminacy of Communitarian Norms	271
5.2.7	The Effectiveness of Third-Party Countermeasures	277
5.3	Conclusion	282

6	Third-Party Countermeasures and Safeguards against Abuse	285
6.1	The Object and Limits of Countermeasures	286
6.1.1	The Existence of a Prior Breach of International Law	287
6.1.2	The Relative Effect of Countermeasures in Precluding Wrongfulness	288
6.1.3	The Instrumental Function of Countermeasures	290
6.1.3.1	The Legitimate Aims of Countermeasures	291
6.1.3.2	The Reversibility of Countermeasures	304
6.2	Obligations Not Affected by Countermeasures	307
6.2.1	Excluded Obligations under Article 50 ARSIWA	315
6.2.1.1	The Obligation to Refrain from the Threat or Use of Force	315
6.2.1.2	Obligations for the Protection of Fundamental Human Rights	319
6.2.1.3	Obligations of a Humanitarian Character Prohibiting Reprisals	340
6.2.1.4	The Separability of Dispute Settlement Provisions	341
6.2.1.5	Obligations Safeguarding Diplomatic and Consular Inviolability	342
6.3	Proportionality	346
6.3.1	The ILC's Contribution	352
6.3.2	Evaluation	360
6.4	Procedural Conditions	364
6.4.1	The ILC's Contribution	367
6.4.2	Evaluation	377
6.5	Conclusion	379
	Conclusion	383
	Bibliography	386
	Index	410