

Contents

Acknowledgements	xi
------------------	----

Introduction	1
Lone mothers, poor mothers and the diversity of family practices	5
Lived experience in a socially constructed world	7
An overview of key arguments	9
Overview of Part 1	10
Overview of Part 2	10

PART 1
The Sociology of Parenting and Paid Work	13

1 'The impossible dream?'
Motherhood and employment	15
Introduction	15
Motherhood and paid work	16
Career motherhood – an increasing trend	17
Labour Force Survey	17
National Child Development Study	20
National Survey of Health and Development	20
The reasons for change – cause or effect?	21
Motherhood, employment and policy	22
The social relations of gender in the workplace	25
'Flexible' and part-time employment	26
Policy and practice	27
Paternity leave	28
Summary	29

2 Parents, children and family lives	30
Introduction	30
Family lives and the work of Talcott Parsons	31
Criticisms of Parsons – an over-socialized vision of (wo)man?	33
Feminism and the invisibility of research on family lives	36
Family practices, family lives and mainstream sociology	37
Family practices and intimate relationships	37

Serial monogamy and the 'pure relationship'	37
The Normal Chaos of Love	38
The Time Bind	41
Parenting post-divorce	42
The New Family?	43
Summary	44
3 Domestic goddesses?	45
Introduction	45
The sociology of motherhood	46
The institution of motherhood – a feminist view	47
Radical feminism	48
The institution of motherhood	49
The transition to motherhood – 'a whole new definition of "normal" '	51
The medicalization of reproduction and childbirth	53
Public attitudes to pregnancy and mothers	56
The aftermath of birth – coping with life and motherhood	57
Working mothers and the 'public interest'	58
Social expectations and the 'good mother'	61
Managing a household – the ideal of the 'domestic goddess'	63
Emotional labour and the 'domestic goddess'	68
Summary	70
4 Moneybags and the invisible father	71
Introduction	71
Fatherhood within a marriage/relationship	72
Fatherhood post-divorce/separation	75
Fatherhood and occupation versus 'invisible' fatherhood	77
Summary	79
5 Working for love or money?
The commitment of mothers to paid work	80
Introduction	80
Working for money	81
Working for a sense of self	85
Social identity theory	87
'Being a breadwinner': The power of earned income	88
The attributes of power	91
A 'modern' definition	91
... and a 'post-modern' definition	92
Summary	94

PART 2

Doing it All (and having some of it)	95
Introduction	95
Summary of similarities to, and departures from, the literature	96
The research project	97
 6 'Baby, you changed my life'
The transition to motherhood	101
Introduction	102
Losing control: The experience of pregnancy and giving birth	102
Depression and lack of maternal control	103
Physical health problems	108
The shock of the new	109
'Domestic goddesses'? Childcare, wifework and emotional labour	111
The value of experience	115
Guilt and the 'bad mother'	115
'Built-in' behaviour? The emotional bonds of motherhood versus the 'institution of motherhood'	118
'Pink jobs and blue jobs': Women's responsibility for domestic labour	120
'Help' with the housework	120
Working to pay for help with the domestic chores	125
'I should iron his shirts': Laundry, and the symbolism of tending men's shirts	126
Summary	129
 7 A labour of love (and a sound investment)
The division of childcare work and the centrality of children to fathers' lives	130
Introduction	130
'What about me?' The transition to fatherhood	131
Fathers' involvement in childcare	134
Fathers who choose to prioritize children over career	135
Fathers who learn to embrace the responsibility for childcare	140
Emotional labour	142
'Good' fathers	146
Summary	147
 8 'Everything I do, I do for you'
The commitment to work and child	149
Introduction	150
Working for love of the job	151
Working to retain a hard-won position – for 'me' and for 'the population I serve'	152

Working to 'earn decent money'?	154
The high social capital of 'career' (and the low value placed on full-time motherhood by society)	156
The low value placed on full-time motherhood by husbands/partners	161
Fear of 'institutionalized' motherhood	163
Working to remain equal: Power, earned income and the 'balance' of the intimate relationship	164
Freedom from domestic duties – and male oppression	167
110%: The commitment of mothers to paid work . . .	170
. . . and the pain of parting: The commitment of mothers to their children	172
'I want to spend more time with my kids than my Dad did': The commitment of fathers to paid work and children	173
Precious time	175
Whose children? Power, the children and the intimate relationship	178
Summary	181
9 Everyone is equal . . .?
Parenthood and workplace discrimination	183
Introduction	184
'Fighting your own corner': Motherhood, discrimination and the workplace	185
During pregnancy	186
After childbirth – the link between flexible working and demotion	187
Being downgraded 'through the back door'	191
A paper tiger: 'Family-friendly' policies	193
The 'arduous battle': Who wants to go to court?	197
Support for mothers returning to work, and innovative practices	198
'New' organizations and innovative practice	199
Being assertive	201
Gendered approaches to returning mothers – and fathers!	202
Summary	205
10 'My children must become our children'	206
Introduction	206
Practical help	207
Challenging 'Parsonian' attitudes	210
Changing social attitudes to family practices	213
Conclusions	215
References	217
Index	227