

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	ix
List of Abbreviations	xi
Note on Translations	xv
Introduction	1
1. Photios and his Political and Cultural Background	5
2. The Bibliotheca	10
3. Clement of Alexandria as seen by Photios	16
4. Structure of the Study	18

PART ONE: METAPHYSICS

Chapter One

The Existence of Eternal Matter and the Eternity of Ideas	23
1. The Philosophical Background of Clement's Thought ...	24
2. Philo of Alexandria as an Important Precursor of Clement	27
3. Clement's own Considerations	31
4. Clement's Opinion about the Eternity of Matter	34
5. Conclusion	37

Chapter Two

The Belief in Many Worlds before the Creation of Adam	39
1. Heraclitus of Ephesus and his Influence on Clement's Theory	43
2. The Role of Jewish and Jewish-Christian Apocalyptic ...	44
3. The Evidence from Book 5 of the Stromateis	46

PART TWO: LOGOS-THEOLOGY

Chapter Three

The Teachings about Two Logoi of the Father	57
1. Philo of Alexandria and the Nature of the Logos	58

2. Valentinian Exegesis of the Prologue to John's Gospel
and the Logos 66

Chapter Four

The Assumption that the Son of God

- is a Creature 75
1. The Origin of the Logos in Philo of Alexandria's
Philosophy 77
 2. Sapiential and Jewish-Christian Narratives and Clement's
Understanding of the Origin of the Logos 80
 3. The Evidence from the Excerpta ex Theodoto 84
 4. The Gnostic γενεά as the Challenge to Logos-Theology... 88

Chapter Five

- The Docetic View of Christ 95
- 1 Controversies over the Logos' Body in Clement's Oeuvre. 96
 2. Docetic Christology: The Evidence 103

PART THREE: ANTHROPOLOGY

Chapter Six

- The Transmigration of Souls 115
1. Metempsychosis as a Philosophical Issue in Clement's
Period 116
 2. Reincarnation in Clement's Surviving Works 120

Chapter Seven

The Creation of Eve from Adam in a Blasphemous and Shameful Way 129

1. Eve as a Literary Motif in Early Christian and Gnostic
Literature 130
2. Eve as a Metaphor in Philo's Philosophy 134
3. Eve in Clement's Hermeneutics 137

Chapter Eight

The Sexual Encounters of Angels with Human Women and the Children Conceived 145

1. Genesis 6.2-4 as the crux interpretatorum 148

2. Genesis 6.2-4 and its Challenge to Clement's
Hermeneutics 151

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Conclusion 159

Bibliography 163

Index 173

This study was inspired by a brief note made by Dr Mark Edwards in the margin of a draft of my earlier book Clement of Alexandria: A Project of Christian Perfection (2008). He suggested that the last chapter should become a separate, independent study. This note inspired further research into Clement's theology and philosophy and eventually resulted in this book. I would like to thank Dr Edwards for his generous encouragement and his valuable comments on the second part of this book. I am very grateful to Professor Andrew Louth for his critical, insightful observations on the introduction to this book. I am likewise indebted to Professor John Dillon for his revision of the first part of the study. My colleague from the University of Chichester, Dr Allan Jenkins, helped me with Hebrew terminology and introduced me to some aspects of current scholarship on the Septuagint, while Dr Carol Downer assisted me with Coptic, which I am learning with great joy. I am very grateful to all of them. Any errors which remain after the kind assistance of all these colleagues are entirely my responsibility.

I would also like to thank the anonymous reader who kindly suggested a number of improvements to my manuscript. I appreciate his or her effort to help me to publish this book.

I would like to express my special gratitude to all the members of the Brill editorial board who accepted the book. In addition, I wish to thank two editors, Louise Shouten and Mattie Kuiper, for their patience and encouragement. I am also most grateful to the very supportive staff from the Library of the University of Chichester, who provided me with all necessary literature during my work on this project. Last, but not least, I wish to warmly thank my wife, Sarah and Dr Mark Newby for their help in improving the English of the manuscript.

Piotr Ashwin-Siejkowski