Peter Bailey is an Independent Scholar and Retired Secondary School Teacher, Ambassador for Public School Education NSW, Casual Clinical Lecturer, University of Sydney, NSW Australia. After a long career in Education, Peter noticed the change from experiences learning and relationship development between teacher and student to a risk-averse, non-testing culture.

Rosamonde Birch has a background in Secondary Citizenship and Learning for Sustainability Education, with experience of lecturing at the University of Plymouth where she recently completed her PhD researching hope, futures thinking and philosophical inquiry with young people. Rosamonde is now starting her PhD at the University of Dundee focusing on the philosophy of becoming and learning for future survival.

Ian Blackwell has worked in the learning outside the classroom sector for 25 years and was Project Manager for the Natural Connections Demonstration Project at Plymouth University. Ian is Forest School Programme Manager at Duchy College, Cornwall, and a Visiting Lecturer at Plymouth Marjon University (UK) where he teaches on outdoor learning and ESD modules. He is also the founder of Dangerous Dads CIC, a social enterprise that supports father figures and their children.

Fiona Cooke has worked with animal welfare organisations for over 20 years and regularly lectures in Higher Education settings. Fiona currently leads the European research team at The Donkey Sanctuary.
