

Contents

A Note on Israel Zinberg / xi

Foreword / xiii

Acknowledgments / xv

Transliteration of Hebrew Terms / xvii

Transliteration of Yiddish Terms / xix

Abbreviations / xxi

PART SEVEN: THE GERMAN-POLISH CULTURAL CENTER BOOK ONE

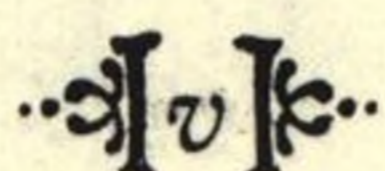

Chapter One: THE CENTER OF CULTURE IN ANCIENT KIEV; ABRAHAM KIRIMI AND MOSES OF KIEV /

3

The economic role of the Jews in eastern Europe in the Middle Ages—Kiev as a center of culture—The Jewish colony in the Crimea—The Italian influence—Abraham Kirimi and his Sefat Emet—Moses of Kiev; his wandering life and literary and communal activity—The decline of the Kiev center.

Chapter Two: JACOB POLLAK, MOSES ISSERLES, AND SOLOMON LURIA / 21

The decline of the Kiev center—The role of Lemberg (Lvov)—The capital city of eastern Galicia—The first hostels of Torah in Poland—The economic situation of the Jews in Poland—The new metropolis of Jewish culture—Jacob Pollak, the founder of Talmudic academies in Poland—His manner of study—Hilluk and pilpul as unique rationalism—Shalom Shachna and his yeshivah—Moses Isserles (Rema) and his literary activity—Isserles and Maimonides—Isserles' theological-philosophical work Torat Ha-Olab—Isserles as codifier—Solomon Luria (Maharshal) and his work.

Chapter Three: DISCIPLES OF ISSERLES AND COMMENTATORS ON THE SHULHAN ARUCH /

45

Echoes and after-effects of the Renaissance era—The apocryphal letter of Aristotle—Twilight—David Gans and his Tzemah David—Abraham Horowitz as rationalist—The rationalist as penitent—Horowitz as author of Berit Avraham and Yesh Nohalin—Mordecai Jaffe as eclectic—The reactionary moods and their causes—Rabbi Solomon Edels and Rabbi Meir of Lublin—The commentators on the Shulhan Aruch: Joel Sirkes (Bah), Joshua Falk (Sema), and Shabbetai Kohen (Shach)—The shadowy aspects of rabbinic literature in Poland—The overly subtle pilpul.

Chapter Four: CUSTUMALS; THE MAHARAL OF PRAGUE, EPHRAIM OF LUNTSHITZ, AND YOM-TOV HELLER / 69

Books of minbagim (customals)—Joseph Juspa of Nördlingen and his Yosif Ometz—Yozpa Shammash and his Minbagim De-Kebillah Kedoshah Virmisa—The Maharal of Prague as hero of popular legends—The Maharal as scholar; his attacks on Azariah dei Rossi—The Maharal's world-outlook—The Torah as the foundation of the world—The mystery of the national community; "My son, my firstborn Israel"—The mission of the chosen people—The Maharal's battle against pilpul; his proposal for reforming the education of children—The Maharal's fellow-battlers—The preacher Ephraim of Luntshitz—The Maharal's disciple and follower, Rabbi Yom-Tov Lipmann Heller—An "untimely figure"—Joseph ben Isaac Halevi; a Maimunist as critic of Maimonides—Yom-Tov Heller as scholar and exponent of the Mishnah—His memoirs, Megillat Eivah.

Chapter Five: LURIANIC MYSTICISM IN POLAND: ISAIAH HOROWITZ / 103

Disputations about the Talmud—The Maharal's apologetic work Be'er Ha-Golah—Rationalist currents in Poland—Isaac Troki and his Hizzuk Emunah—The growth of reaction at the beginning of the seventeenth century—Jewish mystical currents of that period—The mystic and pilpulist, Nathan Spira—Isaiah Horowitz and his literary work—The doctrine of asceticism and the “hallowed” life—Shenei Lubot Ha-Berit and its significance.

Contents

Chapter Six: THE MASSACRES OF 1648 AND THEIR ECHO IN LITERATURE / 121

The massacres of 1648 and their echo in literature—The memoirs of Nathan Hannover, Samuel Feivish Feitel, Shabbetai Kohen, Abraham Ashkenazi, Meir of Sczebrszyn and Gabriel Schussburg—The laments and elegies of Shabbetai Kohen, Yom-Tov Heller, Sheftel Horowitz, Moses of Narol and others—The intellectual decline of Polish Jewry.

BOOK TWO

Chapter One: THE PERIOD OF INTELLECTUAL DECLINE / 135

Economic and intellectual regress—The noxious influence of the way of pilpul on the preachers—The preacher's guide, Leket Yosef; its tasteless and corrupt style—The opponents of pilpul; Berechiah Berach Spira and Yair Hayyim Bacharach—Jonathan ben Joseph and his Yeshuah Be-Yisrael—The learned doctor, Tobias Cohn, and his Maaseh Tuviyyah—David Nieto, Jehudah Briel, Avi'ad Sar-Shalom Basilea, and Solomon Hanau—Shabbetai Bass, Yehiel Heilprin, and Isaac Lampronti.

Chapter Two: ETHICAL LITERATURE / 155

The growth of messianic-mystical tendencies—Jehudah Hasid of Shedletz and his followers—Preacher-mystics and ethical literature—Hirsh Koidonover and his Kav Ha-Yasbar—The ascetic and melancholy character of Kav Ha-Yasbar—Elijah Ha-Kohen and his Shevet Musar—The gracious God and sinful man—The “calculators of the end” and mystical sectarians—The struggle of the rabbis against the covert Sabbatians.

Chapter Three: MOSES HAYYIM LUZZATTO /

173

Moses Hayyim Luzzatto as poet and mystic—His poem Yam Ve-Yabesbet—His new poetic forms—His biblical drama Maaseh Shimshon and dramatic idyll Migdal Oz—The poets Samson Modon and Abraham ben Shabbetai of Zante—Luzzatto as mystic—His messianic-mystical works—Luzzatto under the ban—His later literary work—The significance of his allegorical drama La-Yesbarim Tebillab—The poet's unexpected death.

Chapter Four: THE CONTROVERSY BETWEEN JACOB EMDEN AND JONATHAN EYBESCHÜTZ / 191

Shulhan Aruch rabbinism and its period of decline—The powerlessness of the contemporary leaders—Rabbi Jonathan Eybeschütz and his significance—Eybeschütz as a "seeker;" his inclination to the Kabbalah—Eybeschütz's Kabbalist work Shem Olam—Reconciling the God of Aristotle and the God of Abraham—Resolving the problem of predetermination and free choice—Eybeschütz's world-outlook—The First Cause and the God of Israel—Eybeschütz's belief in combinations of letters—Rabbi Jacob Emden Ashkenazi as a man and writer—His autobiography Megillat Sefer—His battle against Eybeschütz—The significance of this battle.

Chapter Five: THE ERA OF THE GAON OF VILNA /

215

The decline of the Polish-Lithuanian rabbinic world—The author of Sha'agat Aryeh and his controversy with the community—The protest of Jehudah Margolioth and the struggle of the community council of Vilna with the rav ha-aharon—At the crossroads—The Gaon of Vilna, his role and significance—The new du partzofin.

Contents

Chapter Six: THE MAGGID OF DUBNO; THE PIONEERS OF ENLIGHTENMENT / 233

The disciples of the Gaon of Vilna—The Maggid of Dubno—New tendencies—Back to Maimonides—The truthseekers—Rabbi Solomon ben Moses Chelm, Raphael Levi the “mathematician,” and Israel of Zamosc—Abba Glusk and Solomon Maimon.

Chapter Seven: THE HARBINGERS OF THE NEW ERA; PHINEHAS HURWITZ / 249

The harbingers of the new era—Jehudah Hurwitz as stylist and enlightener—His Ammudei Bet Yehudah—Hurwitz’s views on “the advent of the Messiah”—His Megillat Sedarim—Rabbi Jehudah Loeb Margolioth as enlightener—His ethical work Bet Middot and his Or Olam on the natural sciences—Phinehas Hurwitz and his Sefer Ha-Berit—His attitude towards mysticism and the natural sciences; his battle against rationalism—Hurwitz’s program for reconstructing the social foundations of Jewish life—On the basic principle “Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself”—“Love for man as the greatest joy of the soul.”

Chapter Eight: THE MASKILIM OF SHKLOV; MENDEL LEVIN / 271

Baruch of Shklov as enlightener—Mendel Levin (Lefin) as stylist—His activity as an enlightener—His Hochmat Ha-Nefesh—Shklov as center of enlightenment—Joshua Zeitlin as philanthropist and patron—The free academy in Ustye—Naftali Shulman—The enlighteners at the crossroads.

Bibliographical Notes / 287

Glossary of Hebrew and Other Terms / 307

Index / 315