

Contents

A Note on Israel Zinberg	/	xi
Foreword	/	xiii
Acknowledgments	/	xv
Transliteration of Hebrew Terms	/	xvii
Transliteration of Yiddish Terms	/	xix
Abbreviations	/	xxi

PART TEN: HASIDISM AND ENLIGHTENMENT (1780-1820)

Chapter One: JACOB FRANK AND THE FRANKIST MOVEMENT / 3

The after-pangs of the Shabbetai Tzevi messianic movement—The sectarians in Podolia—The rabbis and their ban—Jacob Frank as a person—Frank among the Sabbatians in Salonika—The incarnate Malka Kaddisha (Holy King) and the reincarnation of Shabbetai Tzevi—The Frankists and their conduct—Jehudah Jeiteles and his Sifah—Reminiscences of the Frankists in Offenbach by Moses Porges—Jacob Frank's two Hebrew proclamations—The philosophy of the Frankists—Jacob Frank's legends and tales—The predetermined downfall.

Chapter Two: ISRAEL BAAL SHEM TOV / 27

Rabbi Israel Baal Shem Tov—His childhood—His solitude—The orphan becomes an assistant to a teacher of small children—His love for melodies and songs—The assistant becomes an under-sexton in a small synagogue—His eagerness for Kabbalah—The under-sexton becomes familiar with the writings of the Kabbalist Rabbi Adam—His friendship with Rabbi Adam's son—The young Kabbalist is married and soon becomes a widower—Israel's years of wandering—His marriage to the sister of the rabbi of Brody, Rabbi Abraham Gershon of Kutow—The rabbi and the ignoramus—Israel's solitude in the Carpathian mountains—The crisis in the world outlook of the young Kabbalist—Israel's ways of earning a livelihood—The tavern-keeper and village teacher becomes a baal shem—The Baal Shem Tov's revelation—The Baal Shem Tov's world outlook—"There is no place void of Him"—The Baal Shem Tov's optimism—The influence of Nahmanides and Rabbi Isaac Luria—The Baal Shem Tov's opposition to ascetism—The meaning of prayer; the idea that one can also pray "through common talk"—On sweet and bitter medicines—God can be served only with joy—The Baal Shem Tov and the scholars—The individual and the tzaddik in the Baal Shem Tov's system—The Baal Shem Tov's letter about "ascent of souls"—The Baal Shem Tov and his "fellowship."

Contents

Chapter Three: THE DISCIPLES OF THE BAAL SHEM TOV / 63

The Baal Shem Tov's disciples—His successor Rabbi Dov Baer, the Maggid of Mezhirech—From Medzhibozh to Mezhirech—The sources of the Maggid's teachings—Likkutim Yekarim, Likkutei Amarim, Or Torah, and Or Ha-Meir—Pantheistic conceptions in the philosophy of the founders of the Hasidic movement—The doctrine of tzimtzum (contraction or withdrawal) and the purpose of maaseh bereshit (the work of creation)—Love and tzimtzum as a "complete unity"—The mission of the people of Israel—The tzaddik in the role of the High Priest on Yom Kippur—The tzaddik and the adam be-fo'al (realized man)—Theoretical tzaddikism—The first battle against the Hasidim; the social foundations of this struggle—The excommunication booklet, Zemir Aritzim Ve-Horvot Tzurim—Jacob Joseph Ha-Kohen, the founder of Hasidic literature; his battle against the rabbis—The significance of his Toledot Yaakov Yosef.

Chapter Four: TZADDIKISM AND HĀBAD / 93

From theoretical tzaddikism to practical tzaddikism—Elimelech of Lyzhansk and his No'am Elimelech—The manifesto of practical tzaddikism—"The tzaddik decrees and God fulfills"—

Contents

Two ways of Hasidism—The Rabbi of Lyady, Shneur Zalman—In the heat of controversy—Shneur Zalman's hatred for Napoleon—His death—The significance of Tanya—The problem of tzimtzum in Shneur Zalman's explication—Or Mitlabesh and Or Makkif—God as both immanent and transcendent—Shneur Zalman's extreme idealism—The purpose of the "work of creation"—"The world is created for the sake of Israel"—The three garments: thought, word, and act—The significance of study of Torah and observance of the mitzvot—The doctrine of the three categories: Hochmah, Binah and Da'at (HaBaD)—Two kinds of love and fear—Abavat Olam (everlasting love) and Abavah Rabbah (great love)—Two states in man's heart—The highest degree of love is "beyond the state of knowledge and understanding"—The Kabbalist overcomes the scholar—Tanya on the role of the tzaddik—Shneur Zalman on the secular sciences.

Chapter Five: LOVERS OF ISRAEL: LEVI YITZHAK OF BERDICHEV AND NAHMAN OF BRATZLAV /

125

The standard-bearers of "love for Israel"—Mosheh Leib of Sasov—Ze'ev Wolf of Zbarazh, Menahem Mendel of Kosov, and Meir of Peremyshlyany—Levi Yitzhak, the rabbi of Berdichev, and his Kedushat Levi—The "eyes of God" as man's creation—Love as the primary attribute of God and the cornerstone of the world—Love of Israel and love of the Creator—Everything in the world is filled with God's love—The cosmic role of the Jewish people—The tzaddik must always speak favorably of Jews—Redemption for the whole world—Liberation from fear of the seven departments of hell—The Baal Shem Tov's great-grandson Rabbi Nahman of Bratzlav—Rabbi Nahman's career—His philosophy—Questions to which there is no answer—The world is created for the sake of mercy and requires mercy—Two kinds of heretics—Rabbi Nahman's struggle against the rationalists—Simplicity and sincerity without subtleties; the "wisdom of holiness"—The great state of joy—The melody of the world—The supreme state of silence—The melody of "Rosh Amanah"—The role of the tzaddik; the tzaddik in the state of Moses the Messiah—The tales of Rabbi Nahman of Bratzlav.

Contents

Chapter Six: HASIDIC TALES; ATTACKS ON THE MOVEMENT / 169

Two kinds of Hasidic tales—Collections of Hasidic tales—Their echo in modern literature—Tract literature in opposition to the Hasidim—The Maggid of Slutsk, Israel Loeb; his Sefer Ha-Vikkuah and Glaubwürdige Nachricht—David of Makow and his Zemir Aritzim and Shever Poshe'im—The estranged are reconciled—Irenic tones in the polemic literature.

Chapter Seven: ELIE HALÉVY, SOLOMON LÖWISOHN, AND SHALOM COHEN / 191

The first German-Jewish journal, Sulamith—Assimilationist tendencies—Not a nation but a religious community—Napoleon and the Jewish question—Elie Halfon Halévy and his poem—The “swan-song”—“Israelites,” not “Jews”—Solomon Löwisohn and his work—Löwisohn’s paean to beauty and the “daughter of beauty”—The significance of his Melitzat Yeshurun—Löwisohn’s tragic death—Shalom Cohen—His Mishlei Agur and Matta’ei Kedem—The renewed Ha-Meassef—Cohen’s allegorical drama Amel Ve-Tirtzah—Cohen’s years of wandering—His move to Vienna—A forum for the Hebrew word.

Chapter Eight: MENDEL LEVIN, JACOB SAMUEL BICK, AND CHAIM HAYKL HURWITZ / 213

Mendel Levin-Satanow and his translation of the Bible into Yiddish—The style of Levin’s translation of Proverbs—The rhetorician Tobias Gutman Feder—His tract Kol Mehatzetzim against Levin’s translation into the language of “concubines and servants”—Jacob Samuel Bick and his philosophy—Riktzug der Frantzoisen—Chaim Haykl Hurwitz and his Tzofnas Pane’akh—The humanist-pedagogue and the enlightened merchant—The style of Tzofnas Pane’akh—The anonymous play Di Genarte Velt—Polemic on two fronts.

Contents

Chapter Nine: ANTI-HASIDIC WORKS; THE STRUGGLE BETWEEN THE REFORMERS AND THE ORTHODOX / 233

The Mitnagdim and Hasidim combine against the new enemy—Israel Zamosc opposes the Hasidim—The tract Maaseh Ta'tu'im—Jacob Calmanson against the “dangerous” sect—Mendel Levin's anti-Hasidic work Der Ersbter Khosid and Mahkimat Peti—The anti-Hasidic manuscript Über das Wesen der Sekte Chassidim—Joseph Perl as battler for culture—His satire Megalleh Temirin—Religious reform in Germany—The role of Israel Jacobson—The struggle of the Orthodox against the Reform party—Nogah Ha-Tzedek and the “legitimacy-verdicts”—Moses Kunitz and Aaron Chorin—Chorin's Emek Ha-Shaveh and Kinat Ha-Emet—Eliezer Liebermann and his Or Nogah—The significance of Liebermann's work—Nahman Berlin's counter-argument—The bet din of Hamburg and Eleh Divrei Ha-Berit—The verdicts of the orthodox rabbis—David Caro and his Berit Emet—The rabbis of former days and of the present—Meir Bresselau's tract Herev Nokemet—Labat Ha-Herev Ha-Mithappechet—Conclusion.

Bibliographical Notes / 265

Glossary of Hebrew and Other Terms / 283

Index / 291