

Contents

Abbreviations	vii
Permissions	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
PART I
Transforming Phenomenology: Plurality and the Political	17
1 The Emergence of Plurality	19
Arendt's Critique of Existenz Philosophy and Classic Phenomenology	20
A New Political Philosophy: Rethinking the With-World	39
2 Pluralizing and Politicizing Basic Phenomenological Concepts	51
Appearance	53
Experience	76
World	93
3 Arendt's Phenomenological Methodology	109
An Enactive Approach to Conditionality	109
Dynamic Spaces of Meaning	123
PART II
Actualizing Plurality: The We, the Other, and the Self in Political Intersubjectivity	149
4 Plurality as Political Intersubjectivity	151
Plurality in Political Theory, Social Ontology, and Arendt-Scholarship	152

vi Contents

Plurality, Intersubjectivity, and Being-With 159

A Phenomenological Interpretation of Plurality 175

5 Actualizing a Plural “We” 193

Speaking 194

Acting 198

Judging 212

Authentic and Inauthentic Forms of the “Plural We” 221

6 A Political Ethics of Actualized Plurality 233

The Intrinsic Ethics of Actualized Plurality 234

Plurality and the Ethical Demands of Life, Truth, and Reason 241

Plurality and Alterity 252

Conclusion 263

Bibliography 269

Index 285