

Contents

Acknowledgments	xv
Abbreviations	xvii
Introduction	1
I THE REALITY OF TIME
1 Is Time Real?	7
The paradoxes	7
Aristotle's solution of the 'ceasing instant'	10
Recommended solutions for the 'parts of time'	12
Solutions rejected	15
2 Solutions from Diodorus to Augustine	17
Diodorus Cronus	17
The Stoics	21
Chrysippus' view	22
Two rival interpretations of Chrysippus	25
Poseidonius and Apollodorus	26
Transmission of the paradox	27
Alexander of Aphrodisias	28
Augustine	29
3 Iamblichus' Solution: Static and Flowing Time	33
The modern distinction	33
Iamblichus' distinction	37
Comparison with McTaggart	38
Application to the paradox concerning the parts of time	39
Application to the paradox of the ceasing instant	41
Prichard, Damascius and Simplicius	42
Was Iamblichus' distinction anticipated?	42
Other aspects of the modern distinction in antiquity	44
4 Aristotle on Static and Flowing Time	46
Aristotle's insensitivity to the static/flowing distinction	47
Aristotle does not make flow inessential	50

5	Solutions by the Last Athenian Neoplatonists: Divisible Leaps	52
	The origin of the idea of divisible leaps	53
	The distinction of divisible leaps from atomic ones	54
	Divisibility and indivisibility combined	54
	Application to the paradox of the parts of time	56
	Damascius on the ceasing instant	60
	Simplicius' solution	61
	Retrospect over the contributions of antiquity	62
II TIME AND ETERNITY
6	Does Time Require Change?	67
	First argument: growing older	67
	Second argument: passage	68
	Third argument: clock processes	70
	'Regularity' of the fundamental clock	72
	Fourth argument: the verification of freezes	74
	Fifth argument: the impossibility of relocating the history of the universe	78
	Sixth argument: temporal distance, unlike spatial distance, requires markers	78
	Seventh argument: why not sooner?	79
	Eighth argument: the identity of indiscernible times	80
	Ninth argument: the definition of time	80
	Time without change in antiquity	81
7	Time, Number and Consciousness	84
	The definition of time as number	84
	The relation of number to measure	86
	Time as continuous, number as discrete	89
	Time dependent on consciousness in Aristotle	89
	Aristotle's view explained by reference to controversies on possibility	90
	The philosophical issue	93
	Other thinkers	94
8	Is Eternity Timelessness?	98
	Parmenides	99
	Eight interpretations	99
	The 'special present' interpretations	100
	The 'everlasting' interpretation	103
	The 'timeless' interpretation	105
	The 'B-series' interpretation	105
	Whittaker's interpretation	105
	The cyclical interpretation	107

Plato	108
Plotinus	112
Non-temporal senses after Plotinus	114
Distinct words versus distinct senses	116
Philoponus' dissent	117
Boethius	119
Six other denials of duration	120
Qualifications	124
Aristotle	125
Parmenides fr.8, ll.1-25	128
9 Is Anything Timeless?	131
Universals	131
Numbers	132
Truth	132
Is the idea of eternity inconsistent?	135
Conclusion	136
10 Myths about Non-Propositional Thought	137
Plotinus: eternity and thinking	138
Aristotle: non-discursive thought is propositional	139
Plato's Republic: knowledge of the Forms is propositional	142
Aristotle: the act of thinking is identical with its object	144
Aristotle: the intelligible form is in the soul	145
Aristotle: the intellect is identical with the object of thought	146
The intellect thinks itself	146
Aristotle: human thought requires images	147
Aristotle: the agent intellect and the real self	147
Aristotle: thinking, unlike processes, is complete at any moment	148
Aristotle: contemplating truth is superior to seeking it	148
Gregory of Nyssa's perpetual progress: two rival traditions	149
Plotinus: three levels of experience	152
Discursive thought	152
Non-discursive thought is propositional	152
Non-propositional contact with the One is not a kind of thinking	153
Plotinus: our ascent to the One	155
11 Mystical Experience in Plotinus and Augustine	157
Features of Plotinus' mysticism	157
Plotinus' mysticism and the self	160
Plotinus' mysticism and time	161
Features of Augustine's mysticism	163
Neoplatonist influence on Augustine's account of mystical experience	163

Neoplatonist influence on Augustine's account of time	165
Controversies	166
Augustine's mysticism and time	167
Augustine's mysticism and the self	168
Caveats about Neoplatonist influence	168
Identification of experiences	172
Drugs and mania	172
12 Fear of Death and Endless Recurrence	174
The diversity of fears	174
Lucretius: past non-existence is no evil	176
The reality of past and future	179
Marcus Aurelius	179
Stoic and Epicurean arguments against prolonging life	180
Plotinus against prolongation	180
The Makropulos case against prolongation	181
Endless recurrence	182
Cyclical time versus cyclical events	184
Reasons for the theory	185
Parallel arguments for reincarnation	188
Attitudes to endless recurrence	188
III TIME AND CREATION
13 Did the Universe Have a Beginning? The Background	193
Judaeo-Christian hesitancy	194
Philoponus	197
Late Athenian Neoplatonists	199
Late Alexandrian Neoplatonists	200
Islam and the Latin West	202
Philo on the creation of time and the material universe	203
14 Infinity Arguments in Favour of a Beginning	210
Aristotle against actual and traversed infinities	210
Philoponus turns Aristotle against himself	214
Philoponus against increasing infinity	217
Philoponus against an actual and traversed infinity	219
E.A. Milne's time-scales	224
Avicenna allows an infinity of souls from past generations	225
Aristotle against infinite causal chains	226
Philoponus against infinite causal chains	228
Accidental chains permissible after all	229

15 Arguments Against a Beginning	232
Why not sooner?	232
The theological arguments	238
Willing a change and changing one's will	240
How does a changeless cause make something begin?	242
Can a sufficient cause delay its effect?	244
Can an immaterial cause produce a material effect?	245
Nothing comes from nothing	245
The idleness arguments	249
16 Timelessness Versus Changelessness in God	253
Four reasons for thinking God timeless	253
Boethius: timeless knowledge avoids determinism	255
Timeless versus changeless agency	256
Objection to timeless will	257
The objection generalised to other attributes	257
Does timeless knowledge exclude omniscience?	258
The Islamic objection: does changeless knowledge exclude omniscience?	260
The reply to Ammonius on change in judgments of past, present and future	261
Ammonius anticipated by Augustine and others	263
Changeless and timeless power	264
Resumé	267
17 Plato and Aristotle on the Beginning of Things	268
The dispute over Plato's Timaeus	268
The Timaeus text	272
Plato's influence	276
Aristotle	276
Physics 8.1	276
de Caelo 1	277
A time before time	279
Potentiality	280
de Philosophia	281
Aristotle's influence	282
Temporal and causal aspects of creation	282

IV CREATION AND CAUSE

18 Gregory of Nyssa: The Origins of Idealism	287
Is there idealism in antiquity?	287
Augustine's Cogito	289
Gregory's idealism	290
Is there idealism in Islamic thought?	295

19	The Origins of Occasionalism	297
	Islamic thought	297
	Ghazālī's theory	299
	The influence of Greek scepticism	300
	Other Greek influences	302
	Alternatives to occasionalism: Augustine	302
	Alternatives to occasionalism: the Platonists	305
20	Principles of Causation among Platonists and Christians	307
	Causation without changes	307
	Causation, creation and time	312
	Creation not out of matter	313
	Cause unlike effect	315
	Platonists and Christians compared	316
 V ATOMS, TIME-ATOMS AND THE CONTINUUM
21	Zeno's Paradoxes of Motion	321
	The dichotomy, or the half-distances	321
	Aristotle's replies	322
	Other attempts at solution	324
	The proposed solution	327
	Two unexpected consequences	328
	Achilles and the tortoise	330
	The moving rows	330
	The flying arrow	332
	Large and small	334
22	Arguments for Atomism	336
	Division everywhere	336
	Democritus' cone	341
	Half-distances	342
	de Lineis Insecabilibus	343
	Diodorus Cronus	345
	Epicurus	348
	The character of the arguments	349
23	Types of Atomism: Early Developments	350
	The connexion of atomism with scientific explanation	350
	Indivisibility: ambiguities	352
	Who were the first atomists?	352
	Democritus	354

Plato's indivisibles	358
Are there time-atoms in Plato?	359
Damascius' interpretation: leaps	361
Indivisibles in Xenocrates and the Academy	362
Are there time-atoms in Xenocrates and the Academy?	363
24 Atoms and Time-Atoms after Aristotle	365
Aristotelian objections to atomism	365
Two oversights in Aristotle's objections	366
Diodorus Cronus: four contributions to atomism	369
Epicurus and his followers	371
Succession without contact between Epicurus' minimal parts	372
Does Epicurus accept time-atoms?	375
Strato's riposte to Aristotle	377
The Stoics	379
Plutarch	379
Damascius: non-atomic leaps	380
Time-atomism in perspective	380
Time-atoms in musical theory	381
Time-atoms in modern physics	381
25 Atoms and Divisible Leaps in Islamic Thought	384
The positive arguments for leaps	384
Nazzām's arguments against atomism	386
Leaps and the attack on atomist accounts of rotation	387
Leaps and the attack on atomist commitment to maximum speed	390
Leaps and the attack on atomist geometry	391
Maimonides' summary of Islamic atomism	394
Islamic arguments for atomism	394
Ash'arī's account of Islamic atomism	395
Differences from Greek atomism	397
Islamic and Greek thought	398
Islamic and fourteenth-century European atomism	400
Nazzām on the millstone again	401
26 Stopping and Starting	403
Does the paradox apply to the real world?	403
Proposed solution for being at, or away from, the terminal stages in a continuous change	405
Proposed solution for continuously moving (present tense)	405
Proposed solutions for discontinuous transitions	406
Two rival solutions for moving and resting	407
Aristotle's treatment	409

Preliminaries (i): gradualness of the four main kinds of change	410
Preliminaries (ii): how can change of colour be gradual?	410
Aristotle's solution for moving, changing and resting	412
Aristotle's solution for being at, or away from, the terminal stages in a continuous change	412
Assessment of Aristotle's two solutions	414
Relevance of the problem to the definition of motion at an instant	415
Another version of the problem	416
Implications for the sorites paradox	417
History of analogous puzzles	418
Thirteenth- and fourteenth-century treatments of stopping and starting	418
Table of principal persons discussed	422
Select bibliography	425
Index	450
Index locorum to	475
Time, Creation and the Continuum, Necessity, Cause and Blame, and Matter, Space and Motion. Compiled by John Ellis, Harry Ide and Eric Lewis.	