

Contents

Acknowledgements	page xiii
Preface to the second edition	xv
Introduction	1
Beginning	1
Postcolonialism?	2
A note on terminology: or, on not using the hyphen	5
1 From ‘Commonwealth’ to ‘postcolonial’	7
Introduction	7
Colonialism and decolonisation	7
The emergence of ‘Commonwealth literature’	12
Theories of colonial discourses: Frantz Fanon and Edward Said	19
The turn to ‘theory’ in the 1980s	26
The Empire ‘writes back’	28
Into the twenty-first century	32
‘Postcolonialism’: definitions and dangers	38
Selected reading	41
2 Reading colonial discourses	44
Ideology, interpellation, discourse	44
Reading Orientalism	47
The shape of Orientalism	49
1. Orientalism constructs binary oppositions	49
2. Orientalism is a Western fantasy	50

3. Orientalism is institutional	50
4. Orientalism is literary and creative	51
5. Orientalism is legitimating and self-perpetuating	51
6. There is a distinction between 'latent' and 'manifest' Orientalism	51
Stereotypes of the Orient and Orientals	52
1. The Orient is timeless	52
2. The Orient is strange	53
3. Orientalism makes assumptions about people	53
4. Orientalism makes assumptions about gender	53
5. The Orient is feminine	54
6. The Oriental is degenerate	55
Criticisms of Orientalism	55
1. Orientalism is ahistorical	56
2. Said ignores resistance by the colonised	57
3. Said ignores resistance within the West	58
4. Said neglects the significance of gender	59
'Ambivalence' and 'mimicry' in colonial discourses	61
Stop and think	67
Colonial discourses and Rudyard Kipling: reading
'The Overland Mail'	69
Selected reading	77
3 Nationalist representations	80
Introduction	80
Imagining the nation: forging tradition and history	81
Stop and think	86
Language, space, time	86
National liberation vs. imperialist domination	90
Negritude	93
Stop and think	99
Frantz Fanon, national culture and national consciousness	101
Nationalist discourses, national culture	109
Constructing national consciousness: Ngugi's A Grain of Wheat	111
Selected reading	120

4	The nation in question	122
	The disenchantment with nationalism	122
	Nationalism: a derivative discourse?	125
	Stop and think	128
	Nationalism, representation and the elite	129
	Nationalism, 'race' and ethnicity	131
	Stop and think	135
	Nationalism, gender and sexuality	135
	The nation and its margins	139
	Stop and think	143
	English in the colonies: a national language?	144
	English in the settler nations	144
	'Third World' Englishes: elite discourses or nation language?	147
	Stop and think	152
	The nation in question: Chinua Achebe's Anthills of the Savannah	152
	Stop and think	158
	Selected reading	159
5	Re-reading and re-writing English literature	162
	Interrogating the text	162
	Colonialism and the teaching of English literature	163
	Colonial contexts	168
	Stop and think	169
	Reading literature 'contrapuntally'	169
	Stop and think	172
	Re-reading Charlotte Brontë's Jane Eyre	173
	Stop and think	181
	Jane Eyre : a postcolonial text?	181
	Stop and think	185
	Postcolonial re-writings: Jean Rhys, Wide Sargasso Sea	185
	'Re-writing': possibilities and problems	193
	Stop and think	194
	Selected reading	194

6	Postcolonialism and feminism	197
	Some definitions	197
	The 'double colonisation' of women	201
	Stop and think	206
	Postcolonial critiques of 'First World' feminism	206
	Feminism and 'race'	207
	Learning the limits of 'First World' feminism	209
	'Third World' women	213
	Stop and think	216
	Can the subaltern speak?	217
	'Going a piece of the way': creative dialogues in postcolonial feminism	225
	Representing women in Sally Morgan's My Place	228
	Selected reading	232
7	Diaspora identities	234
	Migration, colonialism and decolonisation	234
	What is a 'diaspora'?	236
	'Of, and not of, this place': home and displacement	240
	Living 'in-between': from roots to routes	247
	Hybrid identities at the 'in-between'	251
	Stop and think	256
	New ethnicities	257
	Stop and think	261
	Cultural diversity, cultural difference and the 'Black Atlantic'	261
	Moving pictures: Beryl Gilroy's Boy-Sandwich	269
	Selected reading	273
8	The limits of postcolonialism?	276
	The habit of self-critique	276
	Postcolonial times? The limits of temporality	277
	New maps (f)or old? The limits of geography	280
	The problem of 'Western' theory	287
	The new 'ghetto' of postcolonialism	291
	Postcolonialism, or the logic of capitalist modernity?	293
	Postcolonialism or tricontinentalism? The limits of materialist critique	299

Globalisation and 'postcoloniality': the new imperium?	303
Where do we go from here?	313
Appendix: 'The Overland Mail (foot-service to the hills)' (Rudyard Kipling)	315
Further reading	317
Index	327