We wish first to thank the members of the Social Text Collective for it was during our editorial meetings that this book began. We also wish to thank all the contributors to this volume for giving so generously of their time, energy, and advice. Thanks go to the publisher for kindly allowing us use of her space for the cover as well as to the publisher and permission editors for their generosity and cooperation in printing us permission. Many friends gave their support at various stages of the project. Special thanks go to Andrew Ross and Bruce Robbins, coeditors of Social Text. We are especially grateful to Monica M. Mackiewicz, the journal's managing editor, for her unflinching good humor, cooperation, and hard work. John MacLure offered us independent help and inspiration in the early stages of the book, as did Jindal. Carol Kaplan, and Thomas J. L. We are deeply grateful to the editor and staff of the University of especially Lisa Freeman and Gretchen Assmann, for their help. Our warm support goes to Hank Schlar (ed.) for his meticulous work and hard patience during the last stages of the project. We are also very grateful to Louis Menand and Sigmund for their generous work proofreading sections of this book.
 Finally, and above all, we wish to offer our deepest thanks to John MacLure, Bob Nixon, and Robert for their inspirational support, love, and teaching.
