

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	3
PART I: The Fetish of Appearance
CHAPTER ONE
The "I" of a Lingua Franca	13
Melayu as a Lingua Franca	13
"If I Were a Dutchman"	26
CHAPTER TWO
What Did Not Happen to Indonesians	38
The Lingua Franca Seen through Dutch	38
A Society of Appearances	48
CHAPTER THREE
Fetishizing Appearance, or Is "I" a Criminal?	54
The Njai and the White Father Seen by an Indo: G. Francis	54
Evading Fiction	68
The Ghost of the Lingua Franca	75
Appearances Again	78
The Camera and the Law	84
PART II: Recognition
CHAPTER FOUR
Student Hidjau and The Feeling of Freedom	97
CHAPTER FIVE
Scandal, Women, Authors, and Sino-Malay Nationalism	115
CHAPTER SIX
Love Sick, or the Failures of the Fetish and of Translation	134
Recognition	134
Photographs	149
CHAPTER SEVEN
The Wish for Hierarchy	161
Suspected	161
Vengeance	169

The Impulse toward Hierarchy	171
Hierarchy, Vengeance, and Literature: The Crowd	174

PART III: Revolution

CHAPTER EIGHT

Collaboration and Cautious Rebellion	183
Collaboration	183
Suspicion Again	192
Red Money, Cautious Rebellion	197

CHAPTER NINE

Revolution	208
Without the Fetish of Modernity: "Freedom or Death"	208
No Entry	216

EPILOGUE

Pramoedya Ananta Toer's "Flunky + Maid," or Conservative Indonesian, Revolutionary Indonesian, and the Lack of Indonesian Literature	231
Notes	255