

中国 Contents

List of Illustrations	viii
Foreword, Edward Friedman	xi
Preface	xix
Acknowledgments	xxviii
1 Introduction: Who Changed China?	1
The Background of Change,	2
Basic Changes of the Communist Regime,	2
The Forgotten Farmer in the Analysis of Chinese Politics,	6
Views of Farmers,	10
The Revolutionary Power of Unorganized Farmers,	12
Notes,	17
2 The “Feudalization” of Chinese Farmers: Bound to the Land	23
Socialist Transformation: Becoming Communist “Peasants,”	26
The Procurement System,	27
Collectivization,	28
Local Emperors,	30
Urban and Rural Segregation: A Castelike Society,	33
Endogamy and the Perpetuation of the Patrilocal System,	37
Exclusion from Socialist Welfare,	38
Self-Awareness,	40
Notes,	42
3 Baochan Daohu: Breaking the Log Jam	46
The First Phase (1956–1957),	46
The Second Phase (1961–1962),	48
The Third Phase (1967),	51
The Fourth Phase (1977–present): The “New” Baochan Daohu ,	53
Provincial and Local Governments,	60
The Government Response,	63
Conclusion: The Snowballing of Baochan Daohu ,	69
Notes,	71
4 Markets: The Currents in the Farmer Sea	76
The Power of Baochan Daohu ,	76

- Manipulation of the State's Procurement System, 77
The End of the State Procurement System, 79
The State Budget Crisis, 81
The Elimination of the Procurement System, 82
The Farmers Take over the Markets, 83
Resistance and the Growth of the Commodity Economy, 84
Garden Economy and the Rise of Rural Merchants, 85
The Rise of the Rural Service Sector, 88
Roadside Markets, Specialty Markets, and Wholesale Markets, 90
Corruption and Marketing, 94
Local Government, 96
Rise of Guilds, 98
Conclusion, 99
Notes, 101
- 5 Rural Industries: Waves of the Farmer Sea 106
Corruption: A Base for Rural Industrial Development, 109
Siqian Jingshen (Four Thousand Spirits), 113
Rural Industry Exploits the Weakness of the Centralized State, 119
Guahu: An Eddy in the Farmer Sea, 120
The Impact of Guahu, 126
Conclusion, 128
Notes, 132
- 6 Migration: The Countryside Swamps the City 137
State Response to Rural Surplus Labor, 137
Corruption and Migration, 138
Grain Coupon Rats, 142
Jiuji Weicheng and Street Vending, 144
Jiaoqu Zhazhai (Settle down in the Fringe Areas), 145
Commercial Fever, 146
Job Creation, 148
A Hostile Urban Environment, 154
Mingong Chao (Tides of Migrant Workers): The Rise of the Chinese Labor Market, 157
The Reform of Danwei, 159
Political Influence, 162
Xiangqianken (Money Seeking): The Rise of Dier Zhiye (Moonlighting), 163
Conclusion, 167
Notes, 170
- 7 Farmers Engulf the One-Child Family Policy 176
The One-Child Family and State Coercion, 177
Farmers' Wishes vs. State Planning, 181
Marriage Boom in the Early 1980s, 182

Maiyijaerzi (Buying Sons at Negotiated Prices),	184
Quxian Shengyu (Circuitous Childbirth, Evading Childbirth Regulations),	185
Corruption,	186
The Rise of Chaoseng Youjidui (Over-Quota Birth Guerrillas),	189
Underground Excess-Birth Guerrillas in the City,	192
When the Enemy is Exhausted, We Attack,	194
"Missing Baby Girls",	195
The Decline of Hukuo as a Form of Control,	196
Cadre Cheating,	197
Developmental Impact,	197
Conclusion,	199
Notes,	201
8 Rural Women: Floating to Power	206
Baochan Daohu ,	206
Markets and Women,	209
Rural Industry,	213
Migration: Looking for New Ways of Life,	218
Corruption,	222
New Farm Women,	223
New Village Life,	224
Conflict Among Women,	226
Conclusion,	227
Notes,	228
9 Conclusion: Farmers Changed China	231
Transformation of the Economic System,	232
Transformation from a Closed to an Open Class Society,	237
Implications,	240
SULNAM and the Collapse of the Urban Public Good Regime,	243
And in the Future . . . ,	244
Notes,	246
Selected Bibliography	249
Chinese Glossary	258
About the Book and Author	265
Index	266