The two self-study cassettes contain listening exercises and speaking exercises. Full instructions on what to do are given in the Workbook itself.

The listening exercises usually consist of several tasks and you'll need to listen to the recording more than once. If your cassette player has a counter, make sure you set it to zero at the start of each exercise, so that you can easily find the beginning again. In the speaking exercises you'll need to 'talk to the tape', but there's usually no need to record your own voice. If you do want to record your own voice, you'll need to use a blank cassette of your own. The speaking exercises give further practice in using the functional expressions and in reading aloud. They will help you to develop your fluency.
