

Contents

Preface to the sixth edition

xi

Part one: What is marketing about?

1 Marketing defined

1

The increasing importance of marketing; Integration, profit and social responsibility; The role of marketing managers; Marketing theory

2 Buyer behaviour

14

Stages in the decision process; The influences of 'augmented product' personality and environment; Corporate buying behaviour – the systems approach; Major marketing stimuli; The behavioural complex

3 Marketing research

29

Marketing research and decision making; The scope of marketing research; Sources of information; Executing marketing research studies; Problems of accuracy; Behavioural and motivational research; Data analysis; Marketing research reports; Marketing experiments; Marketing information systems

Part two: Product/service policy and the marketing mix

4 Product/service policy and planning

55

The product mix; New product planning; The break-even concept; Organisation for product planning; Products and packaging

5 Pricing and demand

78

Problems of pricing; Specific competitive/marketing pricing strategies and practices; Some special aspects of service pricing; The cost base; Discounts; Price change and customer attitudes; Pricing tactics and demand; Recent pricing developments

6 Advertising and promotion: objectives and institutions	100
Total communications and the marketing mix; Advertising – expenditure and strategic considerations; Advertising and the public interest; Control of advertising; Advertising agencies; Other research data sources
7 Advertising and promotion: campaign planning and evaluation	119
Basic steps in campaign planning; Evaluation and research; Media and costs; Media selection and mathematical models; Advertising budgets; Branding; Packaging; Below-the-line media; Sponsorship
Part three: Organisation for marketing
8 Organisation and control	151
Evaluation and control; The profit-centre concept; The major bases of performance evaluation; Information for marketing evaluation and control
9 Channels of distribution and delivery systems	172
Definition and types; Basic channel decisions; Retailing; Non-store establishments; Retail stores; Incorporated retail businesses; Departmental stores; Co-operative societies; Manufacturer-owned outlets; Horizontal integration: strategy and examples; Horizontal integration: current signs of turbulence; Discount stores and franchising; Network marketing; Wholesaling; Channel-choice problems for the manufacturer; Delivery systems in service marketing
10 Sales management	203
Sales forces: tasks and organisation; Company objectives and sales force decisions; Sales management tasks; Motivation; Market and sales forecasting
11 Specific markets: the marketing of industrial goods and services	219
Special features of the marketing mix; The marketing of services
12 International marketing	232
The significance of international trade – the theoretical backcloth; The position of the UK; The UK, the European Monetary System and Maastricht; Methods of exporting; Marketing services and government support

Appendix 1 External sources of marketing information	265
Appendix 2 Bibliography	269
Appendix 3 Examination technique	270
Appendix 4 Test papers	272
Index	277