

Contents

Preface	but I have also you a long-term intellectual debt to,	page ix
List of Abbreviations	any years ago I had the honour of being a	xii
Introduction	member of his seminar on Italian history at the Institute of Historical
	University of London. This gave me an academic	1
	turn in my life after I returned from Australia.
1 Conciliarism and Changes of Mind	research. At its core was the	8
	of the conciliar movement in history, especially that of Florence.
2 Conciliarism and Papalism	influence upon us, among many other topics. So far in my publishing career I have concentrated on	61
3 Italian Humanism	my scholarly ones. I put off dealing with	92
4 The Law	them until now and I meet them again	144
Conclusion	in the Middle Ages but came to recognise the	179
Bibliography	importance of the Conciliar Movement in the fourteenth and fifteenth
Index	centuries previously published a little on this but realising	183
	control the names it passed head on. This book is my attempt to do so.	195

I should like to record my great appreciation for my editor at Cambridge University Press, Liz Friend-Smith. She has helped me at all stages of the gestation and production of the book.

I should also like to record a personal debt to Michael Wilks, David Unsworth and a host friend throughout, Brenda Bolton, all of whom supported me as a scholar early on. I particularly remember, with affection, the camaraderie of the Ecclesiastical History Society, all those years ago.