

Contents

List of Illustrations xi

Acknowledgments xiii

Abbreviations and Terms xv

Introduction 3

1 "A New Fixed Existence": The Modernization of Zlín 21

Longue Durée 22

The Making of Middle-Class Zlín 27

The Lessons of Lynn 34

Integration into Austrian Finance 40

Conclusion 42

2 "Time Es Money": The Americanization of the Dřevnice Valley,
1914–1923 45

The First World War 47

Leftist, Poor, and Prone to Flood: The Dřevnice Valley in the Immediate Postwar Years 54

The Influence of Ford and Endicott-Johnson 57

Getting to Know the Workers 61

Conclusion 64

3 "An End to Politics," 1923–1926 67

The Bat'a System of Management 72

Making "Greater Zlín" 73

The Creation of the Bat'a School of Work 77

A New Morality 80

Conclusion 84

- 4 “Speak Briefly”: Rationalization and Everyday Life, 1926–1932 85
Rationalization 86
Rationalization Bat’a-Style 90
Housing 95
Rationalizing through Gendered Education 97
Enforcing Rationalization 100
Conclusion 105
- 5 “Half the World Is Barefoot”: The Globalization of the Bat’a System, 1931–1937 109
High Tariffs, Aggressive Nationalists, and the Bat’a Response 110
A Trip to Batavia 112
Training for Globalization 117
The National Indifference of the Bat’a Company 120
Transition of Leadership 123
Chetmek 125
Möhlin and Beyond 128
Conclusion 131
- 6 “The Path of Perfection”: Engineering the Batovci for an Uncertain World, 1933–1938 133
“A gram of allegiance is better than a pound of intelligence” 134
Policing Communists 139
Jan’s Social Protection 143
Policing Vagrants and “Gypsies” 149
Perfecting Education 152
Conclusion 160
- 7 “Everyone Gives Their Soul to Their Country,” 1937–1939 163
The Path of Fascism 164
The Nationalist Present 169
Life after Munich 174
The Dream of Belcamp 180
Conclusion 181
- 8 “Not a Nazi, but More or Less a Fool,” 1939–1945 183
Preparing for North America 185
The Nightmare of Maryland 190
Occupied Zlín 192
Blacklisted 193
The Burden of Nazi Authority 198
The United States versus Jan Bat’a 200
Conclusion 205

