

Contents

Foreword by The Very Reverend Dr John Hall, Dean of Westminster	8
Preface	9
Acknowledgements	12
1 The Archaeological Study of Churches	14
Chroniclers and early antiquaries	14
Architectural and archaeological records before the nineteenth century	15
Nineteenth-century scholarship	18
Declining interest in the early twentieth century	21
Revival: towards modern church archaeology	23
World War II and its aftermath	24
Church archaeology reborn	27
2 Church Archaeology Today	32
The quest for knowledge	32
New opportunities for research	35
Archaeology and the living church	36
Redundancy and its aftermath	40
The parameters of church archaeology	46
The importance of church archaeology	47
Organization and responsibility	49
Embracing church archaeology	50
3 Researching Historical and Antiquarian Sources	54
Medieval records	54
Records of destruction, from the Reformation to the Civil War	58
Later church and antiquarian records	60
Documentation of church restorations	62
Record offices and local sources	64
4 Churches and their Component Parts	66
Single-celled buildings	66
Nave	68
Chancel	72
'Quire', transepts and crossing	73

	Aisles and clerestories	76
	Towers and bell-cotes	77
	Side-chapels, vestries and other small appendages	80
	Porches	82
	Crypts	85
	Upper chambers	88
	Unconventional buildings	91
5	The Archaeology of Construction	92
	Alignment, layout and topographical influences	92
	Foundations and walls	101
	Scaffolding and formwork	109
	Doorways and windows	115
	Great arches and arcades	119
	Buttresses, turrets and stairs	121
	Roofs and vaults	125
	Structural carpentry	129
	Reinforcement and repair	135
	Surface finishes	137
6	The Archaeology of Fixtures and Fittings	143
	Doors	143
	Glazing	145
	Floors	149
	Ceilings	155
	Smaller architectural features and sculpture	156
	Screens, galleries and stairs	164
	Seating	173
	Decoration	177
	Belfries	180
	Church furniture	183
7	Surveys of Churches	189
	Architects' surveys and reports	189
	General archaeological surveys	192
	Detailed archaeological surveys	197
8	Recording the Fabric: Aims and Methods	201
	Preparing church plans	203
	Drawing elevations of walls	207
	Photogrammetric recording and related methods	210
	Drawing sections through buildings	212
	Recording roofs, vaults and structural timberwork	214
	Recording individual architectural features	216
	Mouldings	218
	Architectural sculpture and loose fragments	219
	Trade signatures, marks and graffiti	221
	The photographic record	224
	Geophysics and remote sensing	226

9	Investigations into the Fabric	228
	Analyzing walls	228
	Enigmatic features	232
	Invasive archaeology	235
	Recycled components	241
	Incidental archaeology	244
	Archaeology and conservation	248
10	Church Excavations	249
	Nature and limitations of the evidence	249
	Categories of evidence	252
	Archaeological investigation: the corollary	265
11	Analyzing a Church's Evolution	267
	The plan	267
	Development of the plan – by addition	269
	Development of the plan – by contraction	273
	Stratified elevations in walls	275
	Inserted and cutaway features	277
	Roofs and upper parts	280
	Analysis: example 1, Dorchester Abbey	284
	Analysis: example 2, Barton-upon-Humber	292
12	Churchyard Archaeology	296
	Churchyard layout	296
	Ancillary buildings in churchyards	301
	Churchyard excavation	305
	Churchyards in the landscape	307
13	Bones, Burials and Monuments	310
	Burials inside churches	311
	Survival of the evidence	315
	Rites of burial	320
	Exhumation and relics	324
	The excavation of graves	327
	Monuments and tombstones	331
14	Synthesis and Publication: Reconstructing History	339
	Safeguarding the record	339
	Analysis and synthesis	341
	Archaeological re-creation	349
	Publication	352
	Notes	355
	Bibliography	364
	Index	378