

Table of contents

Preface	XI
CHAPTER 1
Introduction	1
1.1 Aims and objectives	1
1.2 Construction Grammar	4
1.3 Overview	6
CHAPTER 2
Productivity	9
2.1 Senses and synonyms of productivity	10
2.2 The concepts of productivity	19
2.3 Definitions and measurements of productivity	24
2.3.1 Existing definitions and measurements	24
2.3.2 Predicting productivity	27
2.4 Syntactic productivity	29
2.5 Type frequency, schematicity and degrees of productivity	34
2.6 Summary	53
CHAPTER 3
New verbs in Icelandic: A general outline	55
3.1 Case and argument structure in Icelandic	56
3.1.1 Type frequency	57
3.1.2 The semantics of the Nominative subject construction	62
3.1.2.1 Nom-Acc	63
3.1.2.2 Nom-Dat	69
3.1.2.3 Nom-Gen	75
3.1.3 The productivity of the Nominative subject construction	76
3.2 New verbs in Icelandic	78
3.2.1 Recent borrowings	78
3.2.2 Analogy and token frequency	89
3.3 Summary	96

CHAPTER 4

Nonce verbs: A psycholinguistic experiment	101
4.1 The experiment	102
4.2 The findings	104
4.3 The semantics of the Dative subject construction	111
4.4 Summary	116

CHAPTER 5

New verbs of communication: A questionnaire	119
5.1 The Transfer, the Caused-motion and the Ditransitive constructions	120
5.1.1 The Transfer and the Caused-motion constructions	120
5.1.2 The Ditransitive construction	126
5.2 The questionnaire survey	128
5.3 The findings	128
5.4 Analogy vs. high type frequency	132
5.5 Summary	135

CHAPTER 6

Old and Modern Icelandic: A frequency comparison	137
6.1 Structural vs. lexical case	139
6.2 The present cognitive-functional CxG approach	143
6.2.1 Swedish	147
6.2.2 English	148
6.2.3 German	150
6.2.4 Icelandic	151
6.2.5 Vocabulary, language contact, type frequency and loss of case	156
6.3 Dative substitution in the history of Icelandic	158
6.4 The "blended" construction in English, Swedish and Faroese	164
6.5 Historical productivity	166
6.6 Summary	167

CHAPTER 7

Synthesis	171
------------------	------------

References	183
-------------------	------------

Appendix A: Case and argument structure constructions in the text corpora and the predicates which instantiate them	191
--	------------

Appendix B: Recent borrowings in Icelandic	199
Appendix C: The questionnaire	201
Preface	203
Name index	205
Subject index	209
Constructions index	209