

CONTENTS

List of figures	ix
List of tables	xxvii
List of contributors	xxx
Foreword I	xxxviii
Foreword II	xli
Acknowledgements	xliii

Introduction

Archaeoethanatology, funerary archaeology and bioarchaeology:
perspectives on the long view of death and the dead

1

Christopher J. Knüsel and Eline M.J. Schotsmans

PART I

Archaeoethanatology – methodological guidelines	21
1 Methodological guidelines for archaeoethanatomical practice Frédérique Blai Zot	23
2 A tale of two worlds: Terminologies in archaeoethanatology Bruno Boulestin	42
3 Words between two worlds: Collective graves and related issues in burial terminology Bruno Boulestin and Patrice Courtaud	55
4 Secondary cremation burials of past populations: Some methodological procedures for excavation, bone fragment identification and sex determination Germaine Depierre	69

5	The accompanying dead Bruno Boulestin	89
6	Denied funeral rites: The contribution of the archaeo- thanatological approach Aurore Schmitt	106
PART II
	Period-specific applications	123
7	Early primary burials: Evidence from Southwestern Asia Anne-marie Tillier	125
8	The earliest European burials Bruno Maureille	140
9	Beyond the formal analysis of funerary practices? Archaeo- thanatology as a reflexive tool for considering the role of the dead amongst the living: A Natufian case study Fanny Bocquentin	159
10	What can archaeo- thanatology add? A case study of new knowledge and theoretical implications in the re-study of Mesolithic burials in Sweden and Denmark Liv Nilsson Stutz	178
11	Neolithic burials of infants and children Mélie Le Roy and Stéphane Rottier	194
12	Defining collective burials: Three case studies Aurore Schmitt	207
13	Different burial types but common practice: The case of the funerary complex at Barbuise and La Saulotte (France) at the beginning of the Late Bronze Age Stéphane Rottier	223
14	Deathways of the Durotriges: Reconstructing identity through archaeo- thanatology in later Iron Age southern Britain Karina Gerdau-Radonić, Janne Sperrevik, Martin Smith, Paul N. Cheetham, and Miles Russell	243
15	The Roman cemetery of Porta Nocera at Pompeii: The contribution of osteological re-associations to the study of secondary cremation burials Henri Duguay	263

16	Reopening graves for the removal of objects and bones: Cultural practices and looting Edeltraud Aspöck, Karina Gerdau-Radonić, and Astrid A. Noterman	277
17	Cluniac funerary practices Eleanor Williams	311
18	'Bring out your dead': Funerary and public health practices in times of epidemic disease Dominique Castex and Sacha Kacki	331
19	Jewish funerary practices in Medieval Europe Philippe Blanchard	353
20	Islamic burials: Muslim graves and graves of Muslims Yves Gleize	377
21	Recognising a slave cemetery: An example from colonial-period Guadeloupe, Lesser Antilles Patrice Courtaud and Thomas Romon	395
PART III
	Archaeoethanatology of associated remains	417
22	Archaeoethanatomical approaches to associated remains in European funerary contexts: An overview Isabelle Cartron and Aurélie Zémour	419
23	An archaeoethanatomical approach to the identification of Late Anglo-Saxon burials in wooden containers Emma C. Green	436
24	Ceramic studies in funerary contexts from Roman Gaul Christine Bonnet	456
25	Animal remains in burials Patrice Méniel	472
26	The walking dead – life after death: Archaeoentomological evidence in a Roman catacomb (Saints Marcellinus and Peter, central area, 1st–3rd century AD) Jean-Bernard Huchet and Dominique Castex	481

PART IV

Applied sciences, experiments and legal considerations 499

- 27 From flesh to bone: Building bridges between taphonomy, archaeoethanatology and forensic science for a better understanding of mortuary practices 501
Eline M.J. Schotsmans, Patrice Georges-Zimmermann, Maiken Ueland, and Boyd B. Dent
- 28 Exploring the use of actualistic forensic taphonomy in the study of (forensic) archaeological human burials: An actualistic experimental research programme at the Forensic Anthropology Center at Texas State University (FACTS), San Marcos, Texas 542
Hayley L. Mickleburgh, Daniel J. Wescott, Sarah Gluschitz, and M. Victor Klinkenberg
- 29 An experimental approach to the interpretation of prehistoric cremation and cremation burials 563
Mogens B. Henriksen
- 30 The taphonomic and archaeoethanatomical potentials of diagenetic alterations of archaeological bone 580
Thomas J. Booth, David Brönnimann, Richard Madgwick, and Cordula Portmann
- 31 3D models as useful tools in archaeoethanatology 600
Géraldine Sachau-Carcel
- 32 Use of archaeoethanatology in preventive (salvage/rescue) archaeology and field research archaeology 619
Mark Guillon
- 33 Managing and reburial of ancient human remains in France: From legal and ethical concerns to field practices 636
Gaëlle Clavandier

PART V

Lexicon of archaeoethanatomical terms 651

- 34 Lexicon of terms used in archaeoethanatology: A work still in the process of becoming 653
Christopher J. Knüsel, Karina Gerdau-Radonić, and Eline M.J. Schotsmans

- Index* 687