

Contents

124	Analysing the assignment and preparing to write	124
124	Grammar and punctuation	124
125	Technical writing	125
124	Reading as part of writing	124
124	Approaching reading assignments: what part should you read first?	124
124	Choosing your reading for an assignment	124
124	Working with your reading	124
ix	Acknowledgements	ix
1	1 You and university writing	1
2	Why a book on university writing?	2
3	Working with others	3
4	You as a writer	4
5	Different types of writing	5
6	Talking for writing	6
7	Getting started, keeping going and dealing with writing blocks	7
9	Getting help	9
10	A note on word processing	10
11	A tour through the rest of the book	11
12	Notes	12
13	2 First thoughts on writing assignments	13
13	Bridging a gap: you and university study	13
15	Practice writing	15
19	Brainstorming	19
20	Generating questions	20
24	Notes	24
25	3 Writing for different courses	25
25	Ways of writing	25
26	Different perspectives	26
27	Unpacking assignments	27
32	Key elements of university writing	32
33	Different ways of knowing	33
35	Structure and argument	35
35	The traditional essay format approach to writing	35
36	The 'building blocks' approach to writing	36
37	Notes	37
39	4 Beginning with the title	39
40	Key words	40
41	Disadvantages of just looking for key words	41

Analysing the assignment	41
Notes	51
5 Reading as part of writing	52
Approaching reading	53
Choosing your reading for an assignment	54
Working with your reading	56
Thinking about the different texts	58
Reading and note taking	58
Making mind maps from reading	60
Reading, referencing and plagiarism	63
Referencing systems	65
Recording references	66
Making meaning through reading	66
'Fitting together' reading	67
'Analytic' reading	68
Reading your own and other students' work	70
Notes	74
6 Organizing and shaping your writing	75
Getting the assignment into shape	75
Some structures used in university writing	81
Developing your argument and working out your 'story'	86
Notes	92
7 Putting yourself into your academic writing	94
One student's dilemma	95
'Parrot writing'	96
Can you be 'original' in your university writing?	98
Using 'I' in your assignments	98
From the personal to the academic	100
Notes	108
8 Putting it together	109
Writing the introduction	109
Writing the conclusion	115
Reviewing your work: redrafting and editing	117
Editing for the reader	118
Reviewing your own work: what are you looking for?	119
Reorganizing your work: an example	120
Notes	123

9 Completing the assignment and preparing for next time	124
Grammar and punctuation	124
Techniques for working on your writing	125
Handing in your assignment	134
Learning from feedback: grades and tutors' comments	135
Notes	139
10 Exploring different kinds of writing	140
Case study: one student's experience	142
Report writing	151
Dissertations and projects	155
Electronic writing	156
Using the web as a resource for writing	158
Evaluating web resources	159
Referencing websites	161
Visual and written texts	162
Notes	163
11 Using learning journals and other exploratory writing	164
Fast writing	165
Learning journals	165
From journals to reflective essays	176
What if your learning journal is assessed?	178
A final reflection	179
Notes	180
References	181
Index	183