

Contents

Introduction to the Transaction Edition	xv
Preface to the First Paperback Edition	xlix
Preface	lxvii

ONE

Conditions of Development of the Political Systems of the Historical Bureaucratic Empires

1] The Historical Bureaucratic Polities and the Setting and the Problem	3
1. Introduction	3
2. Some Basic Characteristics of Political Systems	5
3. The Relations between the Political System and the Other Institutions in Society	7
4. Major Criteria for Comparative Analysis of Political Systems	8
5. Principle Types of Political Systems. The Major Instances of Historical Bureaucratic Empires	10
2] The Fundamental Characteristics of the Political Systems and the Social Conditions of Their Development and Basic Hypotheses	13
1. The Patterns of Development of Centralized Polities	13
2. The Political Activities Undertaken by the Rulers to Insure the Development of Centralized Polities	15

3.	The Development and Structure of Administrative Organs	16
4.	The Development of a Structure of Organs of Political Struggle	17
5.	The Major Characteristics of the Political Systems. The Development of Autonomous Goals	18
6.	The Limited Differentiation of Political Roles	20
7.	The Development of Centralized Polity	21
8.	The Development of Organs of Political Struggle and Bureaucratic Administration	21
9.	The Political Systems of the Historical Bureaucratic Empires as Distinguished from Patrimonial, Feudal, and Modern Political Systems	22
10.	The Problem of the Social Conditions of the Development of the Political Systems	24
11.	The Internal and External Conditions of the Development of the Political Systems. The Development of Aspirations to Autonomous Political Goals and of Limited Differentiation of the Social Structure	26
12.	The Inadequacy of the Internal Conditions. Two Cases of Unsuccessful Attempts to Establish Centralized Polities	28
13.	The Inadequacy of the Internal Conditions. The Problem of the "External" Conditions. The Development of Limited Differentiation in the Social Structure as the Main External Condition. The Historical Data to Be Used in Analysis and Illustrations	30
3]	The Economic Structure of the Historical Bureaucratic Societies	33
1.	The Development of the Economic Organization	33
2.	The Basic Characteristics of the Agricultural Sectors	34
3.	The Structure of the Agricultural Sectors	34
4.	The Basic Characteristics of Mercantile and Industrial Activities	40
5.	The Structure of Mercantile and Industrial Activities	41
6.	The Major Types of Exchange Mechanisms	45
7.	The Scope and Operation of Market and Monetary Mechanisms	47
8.	Differences among the Economic Systems of the Empires	49
4]	Religious and Cultural Organization and Orientation	50
1.	Introduction	50
2.	Religious Organization	51
3.	Major Characteristics of Chinese Religious Organizations as Crystallized during the T'ang Regime	58
4.	Religious Organization in the Islamic States, the Spanish-American Empire, and Europe	60
5.	The Development of the Autonomy of the Religious System	61
6.	Characteristics of Religious Value Orientations	62
7.	The Development of Autonomous Ideological Orientations in the Religious System	64
8.	The Structure of the Educational Systems	65
9.	Summary	67

- 5] Social Organization and Stratification 69
1. Introduction 69
 2. Social Organization and Stratification 69
 3. The Structure of Associations and Communities 79
 4. The Basic Characteristics of the Systems of Stratification 82
 5. The Scope of Flexibility of the Systems of Stratification 84
 6. The Place of the Urban Classes in the Social Organization 86
 7. The Extent and Limits of Criteria of Universalism and Achievement in the Systems of Stratification 88
 8. Summary of the Main Characteristics of the Systems of Stratification and Social Organization 91
 9. General Summary of the "External" Conditions and the Problems of Perpetuation of the Political Systems of Centralized Empires 93
- 6] The Social Conditions and the Institutionalization of the Political Systems 94
1. Recapitulation of the Hypothesis 94
 2. Explanation of the Hypothesis. The Regulative Problems Arising from the Autonomy of the Political Sphere and the Differentiation in the Social Structure 95
 3. The Development of Autonomous Regulative Mechanisms 97
 4. Developments in Legal Organization 98
 5. Developments in Patterns of Communication 99
 6. The Inadequacy of the Autonomous Mechanisms from the Point of View of the Regulative Problems 100
 7. The Relation of the Development of Regulative Problems to the Institutionalization of Bureaucratic Administration 101
 8. The Relation of the Development of Regulative Problems to the Development of the Organs of Political Struggle 102
 9. Summary of Explanation 104
 10. Verification of the Hypothesis 105
 11. Some Additional Problems of Explanation 110
 12. The Conditions for Development of Historical Bureaucratic Empires. The Conditions for Their Perpetuation 110

TWO

Conditions of Perpetuation of the Political Systems of the Historical Bureaucratic Empires

- 7] The Policies of the Rulers 115
1. The Problems of Perpetuating the Political Systems 115
 2. The Major Objectives of the Rulers 116
 3. The Social Setting of the Implementation of the Rulers' Aims 119

4. Policies of the Rulers in the Economic Field	121
5. The Rulers' Policies in the Military Field	130
6. Policies of the Rulers in the Field of Social Organization and Stratification	132
7. The Legal Policies of the Rulers	137
8. The Rulers' Religious, Cultural, and Educational Policies	140
9. Policies of the Rulers in the Political Field	143
10. Classification of the Major Types of Policies of the Rulers	147
11. Major Contradictions in the Policies of the Rulers	149
12. Summary	153
8] The Political Orientations and Activities of the Major Groups and Strata	156
1. The Major Groups Involved in the Political Struggle	156
2. The Place of the Bureaucracy in Political Struggle	157
3. The Place of the Army in the Political Struggle	172
4. The Place of the Aristocracy in the Political Struggle	175
5. The Place of the Religious and Cultural Groups in the Political Struggle	183
6. The Place of the Professional Elites in the Political Struggle	194
7. The Place of the Urban Economic and Social Group in the Political Struggle	198
8. The Place of the Gentry in the Political Struggle	204
9. The Place of the Peasantry in the Political Struggle	207
10. The Major Types of Political Orientations of the Principal Groups and Strata and Their Relations to the Basic Premises of the Political Systems	210
11. Classification of Major Types of Political Issues	211
12. Classification of Major Types of Political Organizations	214
13. Classification of Major Types of the Means of Political Struggle	219
14. The Types of Political Issues and Organizations Related to the Basic Premises of the Political Systems	220
9] The Social Determinants of the Political Processes A Comparative Analysis	222
1. Introduction. The Major Variables Influencing the Political Process	222
2. The Major Types of Rulers' Goals	223
3. "Cultural" Orientation and Goals of the Rulers	225
4. The Influence of Cultural Orientations and Goals in the Chinese Empire	226
5. Summary of the Influence of Cultural Orientations and Goals on the Political Process	235
6. The Major Types of Exigencies Developing in Culturally Oriented Polities	236
7. The Major Types of Collective-Executive Goals	238
8. The Influence of Collective-Executive Goals on the Patterns of Legitimation of the Rulers	240

9. The Influence of Collective-Executive Goals on the Policies of the Rulers and on the Political Orientations of the Major Strata 241
 10. The Influence of the Different Types of Collective-Executive Goals on the Policies of the Rulers 243
 11. The Influence of the Different Types of Collective-Executive Goals on the Political Activities of the Major Groups 246
 12. The Patterns of Political Participation in Societies Oriented to Universalistic Religious or Cultural Goals 248
 13. The Nature of the Exigencies Developing in Polities with Collective-Executive Goals 250
 14. The Conditions for Developing Goals of Self-Maintenance and Their Influence on the Political Process 251
 15. The General Influence of Different Levels of Social Differentiation on the Political Process 253
 16. The Influence of Different Levels of Differentiation on the Political Activities of Various Groups 255
 17. The Effects of Different Levels of Differentiation on the Policies of the Rulers 263
 18. The Differentiation in the Social Structure and the Development of Different Types of Rulers' Goals 267
 19. The Influence of Incompatibility between the Political Goals of the Rulers and Those of the Major Strata on the Political Process 268
 20. Summary 270
- 10] The Place of the Bureaucracy in the Political Process 273
1. The Basic Characteristics of the Bureaucracy. Their Influence on Its Political Orientations 273
 2. The Major Types of Political Orientations of the Bureaucracy. The Patterns of Their Activities 276
 3. Service-Oriented Bureaucracies 277
 4. Subjugation of the Bureaucracy by the Rulers 278
 5. Displacement of Service Goals by the Bureaucracy. Tendency to Autonomy and Self-Orientation of the Bureaucracy 279
 6. Self-Orientation of the Bureaucracy Combined with Service Orientation to the Polity 280
 7. The Criteria of Social Composition and Position of the Bureaucracy in the Status System 281
 8. The Social Conditions and Composition of the Bureaucracies 282
 9. The Influence of the Rulers' Goals and of the Relation between the Rulers and the Major Strata on the Development of Different Types of Political Orientations of the Bureaucracy 287
 10. Changes in the Political Orientations of the Bureaucracy. Attempts to Reform the Bureaucracy 291
 11. The Influence of the Bureaucracy's Service Orientation on Its Patterns of Activities 292
 12. The Influence of the Bureaucracy's Orientation to the Rulers and to Its Self-Aggrandizement on Its Patterns of Activities 296

13. The Influence of the Activities of the Bureaucracy on the Basic Social Conditions of the Political Systems 297
- 11] The Place of the Political Process in the Social Structures of the Centralized Empires 300
1. The Interlinking of Traditional and Differentiated Political Activities in the Political Process 300
 2. The Channelization of the Political Activities of the Major Groups and Strata 302
 3. The Institutionalization of Norms of Political Struggle and of Political Consensus 303
 4. The Relations of Various Groups and Strata to the Basic Prerequisites of the Political Systems and to the Conditions of Their Perpetuation 306
- 12] Processes of Change in the Political Systems 309
1. Processes of Change in Group Structure and in Political Organization 309
 2. The Articulation of Processes of Change through Political Activities and Leadership 312
 3. Major Types of Change 313
 4. The Basic Prerequisites of the Political Systems of Centralized Empires 314
 5. The Basic Conditions of the Perpetuation of the Political Systems. The Places of the Policies of the Rulers and of the Political Activities of the Major Groups in the Perpetuation of These Conditions 316
 6. The Major Foci of Contradiction in the Political Process 317
 7. The Basic Conditions and Characteristics of Processes of Accommodable Change 321
 8. Accommodable Change in China 323
 9. Major Conditions Related to Development of Processes of Marginal and Total Change 333
 10. Political Processes Attendant on the Development of Processes of Marginal and Total Change 335
 11. The Relation of External and Internal Conditions in the Processes of Marginal and Total Change 337
 12. Analysis of Marginal Types of Change 340
 13. General Conditions of the Transformation of the Political System of the Historical Bureaucratic Societies into Pre-bureaucratic Polities 342
 14. Political Processes Connected with the Transformation of the Political Systems of the Historical Bureaucratic Societies into Pre-bureaucratic Polities 349
 15. Major Types of Pre-bureaucratic Polities into Which Historical Bureaucratic Societies Were Transformed 351
 16. The Transformation of the Political Systems of Historical Bureaucratic Systems into More Differentiated Political Systems 353

17. Major Types of Transformations of the Political Systems of Historical Bureaucratic Empires into More Differentiated Political Systems	356
18. Summary	359
13] Conclusions	361
1. Summary of the Argument	361
2. The Relations between the Political System and the Other Parts of the Society. The Tendency to Political Autonomy and Generalization of Power	363
3. The Limitations on the Tendencies of Generalization of Power in the Political Systems of the Historical Bureaucratic Empires	365
4. The Tendencies to Generalization of Power in More Differentiated (Modern) Political Systems	369
Appendix	373
General Remarks on Analytical Tables	375
Tables	388
Notes to the Analytical Tables	442
Tables	449
Bibliography	472
Index	522