

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments		ix
PART I.	INTRODUCTION	1
Chapter 1	Anthropology in Exile	3
	A Revolution that Changed Lives	5
	Identity between Change and Continuity	7
	The Women of this Book	9
	Struggles in a Known and an Unknown Context	11
	Sadness and Passion: Both a Researcher and a Political Activist	14
	Mirroring Effect of Life Stories	16
	The Sun Had Died	18
Chapter 2	Configuration of Identities	25
	Identity: A Contested Concept	25
	Identity: A Process of Becoming	27
	Multiple Identities	29
	Identity and Situated Agency	31
	To Define and to be Defined	32
Chapter 3	Souls and Mirrors	37
	Anthropology and Invisible Power	38
	Deconstruction and Delegitimization of the Cartesian Subject	40
	New Perspectives within Anthropology	41
	Farewell to Dichotomies	45

	Representation and Power	48
PART II.	THE LOST HOME	51
Chapter 4	Writing Past: When Home Became Hell	53
	Short Historical Background of the Protest	53
	Women in the Pahlavi Era (1925-1979)	58
	Transitional Phase: "The Spring of Freedom"	62
	Institutionalized Phase: The Period of Suppression	71
Chapter 5	The Spring of Freedom: Revolutionary Years	75
	When Politics Became Everything	77
	Becoming Politically Active	79
	Age and Identity Formation	84
	Emergence of New Ideals: Death Becomes Yours	88
	To Be a Woman: Gender and Politics	92
Chapter 6	Living in Hell: The Years of Suppression	101
	The Years of Horror	102
	The Death of Ideals	104
	When Being Political Became a Crime	111
	The Lost Home inside the Home	116
PART III.	EXILE	119
Chapter 7	Exiles and Diasporas	121
	Victimizing Refugees	122
	Exile and Liminality	125
	Exile and Diaspora	132
	Nomads	134
Chapter 8	Writing Present	137
	The United States and the Netherlands	138
	Approaches toward Migration	147
	Continuity or Discontinuity: A Contextual Comparison	152
Chapter 9	How Present is the Past?	161
	What Makes these Women Different?	162
	The First Years in Exile	165

	Continuous Strangers: Iranian Women in the Netherlands	169
	Irangelles: A Better Home Abroad?	179
	The Differences between the Netherlands and the United States	184
Chapter 10	The Home and the Future	187
	Diasporic Way of Approaching Home	189
	Homeland in the Netherlands	193
	Homeland in the United States	195
	What About Tomorrow?	199
	Contextualizing the Future	205
Chapter 11	Space for Hybridity	209
	Hybridity and Essentialism	210
	The Limits of Practical Hybridity	211
	Intentional Hybridity	216
	Hybridity at the Discursive Level	218
	Multiculturalism and Hybridity	231
Conclusion		235
Epilogue	Positioning: Research that Changed my Life	247
References		253
Index		273