

Contents

|   |                                                                      |     |
|---|----------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
|   | FOREWORD TO THE NEW EDITION                                          | xi  |
|   | TRANSLATOR'S INTRODUCTION: THE PHILOSOPHYOF PAUL RICOEUR         | xv  |
|   | GENERAL INTRODUCTION: QUESTION OF METHOD                             | 3   |
| 1 | Descriptive Method and Its Limits                             | 4   |
| 2 | Abstraction of the Fault                                      | 20  |
| 3 | Abstraction of Transcendence                                  | 29  |
|   |                                                                  |     |
|   | PART I DECISION: CHOICE AND ITS MOTIVES                              | 35  |
|   | CHAPTER 1: PURE DESCRIPTION OF "DECIDING"                            | 37  |
| 1 | Intentionality of Decision: The Project                       | 41  |
| 2 | The Imputation of Myself: "Se Decider"—Making up My Mind | 55  |
| 3 | Motivation of Willing                                         | 66  |
|   |                                                                  |     |
|   | CHAPTER 2: MOTIVATION AND THE CORPOREALINVOLUNTARY               | 85  |
| 1 | Need and Pleasure                                             | 88  |
| 2 | Motives and Values on the Organic Level                       | 104 |
| 3 | Body and the Total Field of Motivation                        | 122 |
|   |                                                                  |     |
|   | CHAPTER 3: HISTORY OF DECISION: FROMHESITATION TO CHOICE         | 135 |
| 1 | Hesitation                                                    | 137 |
| 2 | The Process of Attention                                      | 149 |
| 3 | Choice                                                        | 163 |
| 4 | Determination and Indetermination                             | 181 |

|              |                                                               |     |
|--------------|---------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| PART II      | VOLUNTARY MOTION AND HUMAN CAPABILITIES                       | 199 |
| CHAPTER 1:   | PURE DESCRIPTION OF ACTING AND MOVING                         | 201 |
| 1            | Intentionality of Acting and Moving                    | 205 |
| 2            | Moving and Dualism                                     | 216 |
| CHAPTER 2:   | BODILY SPONTANEITY                                            | 231 |
| 1            | Preformed Skills                                       | 231 |
| 2            | Emotion                                                | 250 |
| 3            | Habit                                                  | 280 |
| CHAPTER 3:   | MOVING AND EFFORT                                             | 308 |
| 1            | Effort, Emotion, and Habit                             | 312 |
| 2            | Effort and "Motor Intention"                           | 318 |
| 3            | Being Able and Willing                                 | 327 |
| 4            | Limits of a Philosophy of Effort: Effort and Knowledge | 331 |
| PART III     | CONSENTING: CONSENT AND NECESSITY                             | 339 |
| CHAPTER 1:   | THE PROBLEMS OF CONSENT                                       | 341 |
| 1            | The Third Cycle of the Involuntary                     | 341 |
| 2            | Consent: Pure Description                              | 343 |
| CHAPTER 2:   | EXPERIENCED NECESSITY                                         | 355 |
| 1            | Character                                              | 355 |
| 2            | The Unconscious                                        | 373 |
| 3            | Life: Structure                                        | 409 |
| 4            | Life: Growth and Genesis                               | 425 |
| 5            | Life: Birth                                            | 433 |
| CHAPTER 3:   | THE WAY OF CONSENT                                            | 444 |
| 1            | Necessity as Non-Being and the Refusal                 | 444 |
| 2            | From Refusal to Consent                                | 466 |
| CONCLUSION:  | AN ONLY HUMAN FREEDOM                                         | 482 |
| BIBLIOGRAPHY |                                                               | 487 |
| Index |                                                               | 495 |