

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
1 Introduction	1
1.1 The Concept of Constructions	1
1.2 A Brief Introduction to Construction Grammar	6
1.3 An Alternative Account: Lexicosemantic Rules	7
1.4 Advantages of the Construction Account	9
1.5 Traditional Motivations for Lexical Rules	21
2 The Interaction between Verbs and Constructions	24
2.1 Frame semantics	25
2.2 The Nature of Verb Meaning	27
2.3 The Nature of Constructional Meaning	31
2.4 The Integration of Verb and Construction	43
2.5 Possible Relations between Verbs and Constructions	59
2.6 Conclusion	66
3 Relations among Constructions	67
3.1 Relevant Psychological Principles of Language Organization	67
3.2 Motivation	69
3.3 Representing Motivation by Inheritance	72
3.4 Relating Particular Constructions	81
3.5 Multiple Inheritance	97
3.6 Inheritance within Constructions	98
3.7 Conclusion	99
4 On Linking	101
4.1 Transformational Approaches of Argument Structure	101
4.2 Generalizations across Constructions	108
4.3 Conclusion	119
5 Partial Productivity	120
5.1 Introduction	120
5.2 Indirect Negative Evidence	122
5.3 Circumscribing Verb Classes	125
5.4 Exceptions	129
5.5 Accounting for the Exceptions: A Usage-based Account	133
5.6 Conclusion	139

6	The English Ditransitive Construction	141
6.1	Introduction	141
6.2	The Existence of the Construction	141
6.3	The Semantics	142
6.4	Conclusion	151
7	The English Caused-Motion Construction	152
7.1	Introduction	152
7.2	The Existence of the Construction	153
7.3	The Various Interpretations	161
7.4	Semantic Constraints	164
7.5	The Load/Spray Alternation	175
7.6	Conclusion	179
8	The English Resultative Construction	180
8.1	Introduction	180
8.2	The Status of the Postverbal NP	182
8.3	Middle Formation	183
8.4	Other Accounts	185
8.5	The Existence of a Resultative Construction	188
8.6	Constraints on the Resultative Construction	193
8.7	Conclusion	198
9	The Way Construction	199
9.1	Introduction	199
9.2	The Existence of the Construction	199
9.3	The Semantics of the Way Construction	202
9.4	Semantic Constraints	212
9.5	The Lexical Complex Predicate Approach	214
9.6	Relation to Resultatives	215
9.7	Conclusion	217
10	Conclusion	219
10.1	Other Constructional Approaches	219
10.2	Summary	224
	Notes	229
	Bibliography	243
	Index	261