

Table of contents

Table of figures	IX
Acknowledgements	XI
Introduction	1
Some groundwork	7
Part I. Time
From puer aeternus to puer existens : The advent of the child "thrown forth"	15
A series of footnotes to Rose	15
The temporal otherness of childhood	18
The Little Prince , between untameable others and untimely selves	21
The very timely puer aeternus	22
The thorny scandal of otherness	27
"Not a second for repose": Untimely others	29
"Serious men" and miserly adults	32
The fox as didactic adult	36
Childhood and the future	43
Existential wait and the child as hope	44
Hope for the end of the wait	46
What are we waiting for? Existential wait in children's literature and adventure	49
Promised plenitude with polar bears	52
The unknowable end of the wait	54
The rhythmical otherness of childhood	56
The divided adult	59
Part II. Otherness
"Gaps", desire, and the didactic discourse	69
Fiction and desire	69
What's in the gap? Picturebook theory and the mighty "gap-filler"	72
"Readerly" gap, or didactic gap?	74
The didactic gap, between "reasonable" interpretation and child might	78

Defining the adult-child didactic relation	83
Collapsed prescriptions in the didactic discourse	90
Subject but object but project: The child "thrown around"	95
Cheating death: The Dumbledore problem	100
Problems of others	103
The adult-child relationship as a special "problem of others"	103
The child as "living affirmation of human transcendence"	104
The other, beyond the ethical and the empathetic	108
How to cure your dad of his problem of others	113
The pains of living among others	122
Togetherness in the face of otherness	131
The other within oneself	135
Part III. Commitment
"An exigence and a gift": Committed children's literature	147
Political literature for children	147
The didactic discourse of committed children's literature	150
Theorising committed literature	152
Anguish and hope in the committed children's book	156
The political child and the apolitical adult in committed children's literature	162
Going on a guilt-trip: Ecological children's literature	169
Contemporary children's literature as a form of committed literature	178
The pedagogical romance	185
Love	185
All education is a failure	191
Pleasure and jouissance of the pedagogical text	196
Spud subversion	200
Adulthood reloaded: The pedagogical romance as a form of play	203
Conclusion	205
Bibliography	211
Name index	221
Subject index	223