Contents

Illustrations and Charts xi

Preface xiii

Part 1
Background to Research

1. Understanding Genealogical Research 3

The true nature of research—Genealogy and science—Completing the family picture—Genealogy and historical background—The importance of places—Nothing but the facts—What is expected?—Educational opportunities—A realistic perspective—Family history professions—Conclusion

2. Language, Terminology and Important Issues 29

Language changes and handwriting—Changes in the language—Naming practices—The calendar

3. Surveying, Analyzing, and Planning 57

Secondary research: your preliminary survey—Preserve preliminary survey results—Pedigree analysis—Get everybody—Jurisdictions—Locality analysis—Tradition, common sense, and helpful clues—Additional help

4. Evidence 79

Basic definitions—Standard of proof—Types of evidence—Sources vs. evidence—Original and derivative sources—When evidence does not make sense—Conflicting evidence—More information on evidence

5. Libraries and the National Archives (NARA) 99

The purposes of library research—Some important libraries—FamilySearch libraries—A library's online catalog—Library classification systems—The National Archives and Records Administration (NARA)—Final observation about library use

6. Reference Works 115

Guides to locality data—Guides to non-original sources—Guides to original sources—Conclusion

7. Organizing and Evaluating Your Research Findings 143
The reasons and the requirements—Note-keeping methods—Research logs and notes—Organizing your research notes—Special searches—Evaluating the information in your notes—One more step: the research report—Reminder notes—Abstracts and forms—Card files and computer indexes—Records relating to correspondence—Concluding thoughts

8. Successful Correspondence 165
Filing documents acquired by correspondence—Analyzing your correspondence results—Review of research note requirements—Writing your letter—Appearance matters—To whom do I write?—Conclusion and checklist

9. Computer Technology and Family History 175
Concepts and definitions of modern technology—Technological resources important to family history—Conclusion

10. Family History on the Internet 201
Significant steps and a current perspective—Keeping on track—Major family history websites—Enhancing your search results on these major sites—Other important websites—Conclusion

11. Family History: Going Beyond Genealogy 237
The what and why of family history—Sources—Historical considerations—African American family history and the Freedmen's Bureau records—Writing family history—Objectivity

Part 2
Records and Their Use

12. Compiled Sources and Newspapers 255
Family history and compiled sources—Newspapers—Limitations of compiled sources—Final observation

13. Vital Records 279
Beginning and background—Using vital records for family history—Securing copies of the records—Town meeting records—Record problems—Final observations

14. Census Returns 315
What is the census?—Where are the census population schedules?—Special census indexes—Military service information in the census—Colonial censuses, special enumerations, and state censuses—Important non-population census schedules—Glossary of census terms

15. Using Census Records in Your Research 379
Benefits and uses—Limitations of the census as a family history source—When should the census be searched?—Examples of census use—Conclusion

16. Understanding Probate Records and Legal Terminology 399
Definition and background of probate records—Content and genealogical value—The limitations of probate records—Legal terminology—Important details

17. What About Wills? 423
Kinds of wills—Proving (probating) the will—The contested will—The value of wills—Record problems—Finding and using wills—Help with a difficult problem

18. The Intestate, Miscellaneous Probate Records, and Guardianships 447
The intestate and the probate process—Miscellaneous probate records—Guardianships—Conclusion

19. Government Land: Colonial and American 469
Background—Land from the colonial government—After the Revolution—History of land entries in the public domain—Records created by land entry in the public domain—Land patents from the BLM—Texas—Other state-land states

20. Local Land Records 495
Land titles—Records that relate to land—Using land records—Tax records—County land ownership maps—Availability of local land records—Conclusion

21. Abstracting Probate and Land Records 529
Abstract vs. extract—The nature of the abstract—Abstracts of deeds—Abstracts of wills

22. Court Records and Family History 547
Background and definition—A misconception—The American court system—Records and our access to them—Legislative records—Adoption records—Note on Virginia's independent cities—Case reports, reporters, and digests—Conclusion

23. Property Rights of Women as a Consideration 575
Background—Real estate conveyances—Laws and customs relating to inheritance—Conclusion

24. Church Records and Family History 585
Types of records—The nature of the records—Locating church records

25. Immigrant Ancestor Origins: American Finding Aids 625
Immigration records: their nature and value—Locating and using immigration records—Passport applications—Conclusion

26. Military Records: Colonial Wars and the American Revolution 653
Background and history—The records—Colonial wars—The Revolutionary War—Using Revolutionary War records—Loyalists and the Revolutionary War

27. Military Records: After the Revolution 689
Between the Revolution and Fort Sumter—The Civil War, 1861–65—Military actions following the Civil War—The Regular Army or Regular Establishment—World War I and beyond—State military records and records relating to civilians—Printed military sources—When to use military records—Conclusion

28. Cemetery and Burial Records 727
Background—Gravestone and monument inscriptions—Access to cemetery records—Sextons' records—Help in finding the records—Records of funeral directors—Conclusion

Index 739