

Contents

|   |   |      |
|---|---|------|
| Preface                              | page   | vii  |
| Preface to the First Edition         |   | xiii |
| Part One                                    |   |      |
| The Ancient Constitution and the Feudal Law |   |      |
| I   | Introductory: the French Prelude to Modern Historiography                     | I    |
| II  | The Common-law Mind: Custom and the Immemorial                                | 30   |
| III   | The Common-law Mind: the Absence of a Basis of Comparison                     | 56   |
| IV  | The Discovery of Feudalism: French and Scottish Historians                    | 70   |
| V   | The Discovery of Feudalism: Sir Henry Spelman                                 | 91   |
| VI  | Interregnum: the Oceana of James Harrington                            | 124  |
| VII   | Interregnum: the First Royalist Reaction and the Response of Sir Matthew Hale | 148  |
| VIII  | The Brady Controversy   | 182  |
| IX  | Conclusion: 1688 in the History of Historiography                             | 229  |

Contents

Part Two

The Ancient Constitution Revisited: a Retrospect from 1986

|     |                                       |     |
|-----|---------------------------------------|-----|
| I   | Historiography and Common Law         | 255 |
| II  | Civil War and Interregnum             | 306 |
| III | Restoration, Revolution and Oligarchy | 335 |
|     | Index                          | 389 |