

Contents

List of Tables.....	ix
List of Figures.....	x
List of Abbreviations and Symbols.....	x

Chapter 1. Introduction

1.1 Purpose of the dissertation.....	1
1.2 Theoretical framework and structure of the dissertation.....	1
1.3 The experiment.....	3
1.4 The data.....	3
1.5 Theoretical concepts and definitions.....	5
1.6 Previous work on prefix semantics.....	11

Chapter 2. A typology of Czech and Russian prepositions

2.1 Some preliminary remarks.....	21
2.2 Typology of prepositions.....	21
2.3 Path prepositions and landmarks: frequency patterns in the data.....	24
2.4 Semantic features for Path prepositions.....	27
2.5 Prototype semantics of Path prepositions.....	38
2.6 Interactions among semantic features.....	52
2.7 Summary of Path Prepositions in Czech and Russian.....	56

Chapter 3. Source and Goal Prefixes in Czech and Russian

3.1 Classification of prefixes.....	57
3.2 Co-occurrence of prefixes and prepositions.....	57
3.3 Source/Goal prefix classification with verbs of motion.....	59
3.4 Some properties of TR/LM relational features.....	61
3.5 Prototype semantics of Source/Goal prefixes.....	65
3.6 Prefixes and deixis.....	88
3.7 Goal orientation in narration and conceptualization.....	101
3.8 The trajectory orientation and TR/LM relational features revisited.....	106

Chapter 4. Path Prefixes in Czech and Russian

4.1 Classification of Path prefixes.....	107
4.2 Co-occurrence of prefixes and prepositions.....	107
4.3 Prototype semantics of Path prefixes.....	110
4.4 Path prefixes and deixis: evidence for deictic spanning.....	136
4.5 Summary of spatial prototypes for Path prefixes.....	141
4.6 Path prefixes or Spanning prefixes?.....	143

Chapter 5. The prefix по-/ро-

5.1 Classification of the prefix по-/ро-	147
5.2 Contexts of usage for Russian по- perfectives with Motion Verbs.....	149
5.3 The spatial schema for по- with Motion Verbs.....	150
5.4 The по- schema and the spatial prototype	157
5.5 Abstract use of the prefix по-	160
5.6 The по- schema and inference with verbs of motion	168
5.7 По- perfectives compared to determinate verbs of motion	170
5.8 Czech po-	174
5.9 Summary.....	180

Chapter 6. Conclusion: spatial and abstract prefixes

6.1 Prefixes and prepositions are systematic.....	181
6.2 Dismantling the typology	183
6.3 Mapping between space and abstraction: the privileged role of the spatial prototype	188
6.4 Prototype vs. invariance	189
6.5 The nature of spatial prototypes: a comparison to Janda (1986).....	191
6.6 Trajectors, landmarks, and abstract prefixes	199
6.7 Semantic networks.....	205
6.8 Semantic extension: inference, experiential correlation, metaphor and metonymy	213
6.9 What is a submeaning?.....	215
6.10 Types of prefixation.....	210
6.11 Prefixes as verbal classifiers.....	220
6.12 Abstract prefixes: literal or metaphoric?.....	221
6.13 Summary: a comparison to previous work	225
6.14 Prefixation and Aspect	227
6.15 Czech vs. Russian.....	228

References	237
-------------------------	-----